Ford submits budget of 'hard choices'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford today proposed increased defense spending, higher Social Security taxes and cutbacks in some welfare programs in a fiscal 1977 budget that he said would help restore stability to the national economy.

"This budget proposal promises only what we know we can deliver — nothing more and nothing less than $394.2 billion will buy," he said in a budget signing ceremony. The budget includes new tax reductions of $10 billion this year and $28 billion in 1977.

The immediate reaction from some leading congressional Democrats was that the government can afford to do much more for employment and the needy than Ford is proposing.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, said Ford was engaged in "a cruel shell game in which vital programs in the areas of health, education, social services and child nutrition are significantly cut back.'

Rep. Brock Adams of Washington, chairman of the House Budget Committee said the budget would add to unemployment and would "take from those with low incomes and give to the big corporations."

He said his committee will begin hearings on the Ford budget on Monday.

Ford said in a statement accompanying the budget that by cutting the growth in government spending in half in 1977, his administration would "arrest a spending trend that increasingly threatened our national economic stability."

The Ford budget, for the fiscal year begining Oct. 1, 1976, calls for total expenditures of $394.2 billion and revenues of $351.3 billion, leaving a deficit of $43 billion, the second highest since World War II. But Ford said a balanced budget should be possible by 1979.

He proposed to reverse the trend toward big government by giving the states new authority over 59 individual federal programs, including Medicaid and 15 other health programs. The states would receive money for the programs almost without strings.

Ford said federal spending on the health programs would total $10 billion in 1977, up about $800 million over 1976.

Ford hinted for the first time he no longer would insist on the $395-billion 1977 spending ceiling he demanded previously as a trade-off for permanent reductions in income taxes, although he made clear he prefers that ceiling.

But he said his budget should put the economy on a growth path that can be sustained, even though unemployment will remain high for the next several years.

While Ford said his tax reduction proposals would cut income taxes in 1977 by $227 for a family of four making $15,000 a year — compared with 1974 tax rates — the increase in Social Security taxes would take back $45 of that. The Social Security increase would amount to $119

Dexter man seriously hurt

A Dexter man was seriously injured and three persons received minor injuries in two area traffic accidents Tuesday, the highway patrol announced today.

Three of the injuries occurred in a two- car accident at 12:40 p.m. Tuesday eight miles east of Doniphan on Highway 160 in Ripley County.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Bill Richard Glidewell, 38, of Metropolis, Ill., attempted a left turn into the path of an eastbound car driven by Richard Hess, 24, of Doniphan.

Both drivers received minor injuries, and a passenger in the Glidewell car, James Glover, 28, of Dexter, suffered serious injuries. Glidewell and Glover were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff, and Hess was taken to Ripley County Hospital iat Doniphan.

An Annapolis resident received minor injuries in a single- vehicle accident at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday three miles west of Hogan on Route A inIron County.

The accident occurred when Magdaln E.Savage, 55, of Annapolis lost control of an eastbound pickup truck on ice and the vehicle ran off the road and overturned.

The victim was taken to Arcadia Valley Hospital at Pilot Knob.

House kills sales bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A surprised Phillip Scaglia stood in amazement after the Missouri House on Tuesday defeated a bill that would have allowed counties on an individual basis to repeal the state's controversial ban on Sunday sales.

"I sure thought we were going to win today," said the Kansas City Democrat, somewhat dejectedly, following the 53-97 vote.

It was the first time the bill to repeal the so-called blue law had ever made it to the House floor, and action on several amendments during nearly four hours of debate seemed to indicate to Scaglia the proposal would gain tentative approval.

"I'm just surprised," he said. "I can'to 'plain it."

Other lawmakers were also surprised by the result, especially after two-to-one approval was given to an amendment that would have submitted the entire proposal to a statewide vote in November if it passed the legislature.

"The legislature today has gone contrary to the will of the people, he charged, claiming those voting against the measure gave in to "a highly organized, well financed minority, and in many cases very vocal."

He contended the "Sunday Blue Law cannot be justified on any grounds—legal, moral, social," and called tactics of opponents to defeat repeal "reprehensible."

Scaglia, who has led a fight to repeal the Sunday sales ban for several years, added he didn't think there was any hope for sucessful passage of the bill.

The Senate, meanwhile, rejected an internal rule change which would have set up a priority committee to speed consideration of important legislation.

The committee would assess the value of bills and move them up on the Senate's agenda for quicker consideration than other lesser measures.

Scott's budget share will be $52.3 million

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri taxpayers must pay $8 billion as their share of the cost of the federal budget sent to Congress today, Missouri Public Expenditure Survey reported. That is more than three times the $2.6 billion state budget sent to the legislature last week.

The survey noted that the federal budget calls for expenditures totaling $394.2 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 and revenues estimated at $351.3 billion, leaving a deficit of $43 billion. Proposed expenditures, the survey pointed out, are $19.3 billion higher than estimated federal expenditures in the current fiscal year, and $69.6 billion above expenditures last fiscal year.

Scott County's share of the cost of the federal budget will be about $52.3 million, the survey said. It based its calculations on the proportion of personal income in each Missouri county.

The projected deficit next fiscal year will be the eighth consecutive deficit, and follows a deficit for the current fiscal year estimated at $76 billion, largest peacetime deficit in the nation's history, the survey said.

"Controlling runaway deficits," the survey said, "is an essential step in checking inflation."

Congress will be following new procedures under which it must look at the budget as a whole, the survey noted. Many observers, the survey said, expect the spending ceiling set by Congress to authorize significantly higher spending than the president's budget. The next phase of the battle of the budget, it said, will be in the Congressional arena, so citizens concerned with increased spending should make their views known to their Washington lawmakers.

The survey placed Missouri's share of the federal budget at 2.03 per cent of the total, utilizing a formula that has been developed and refined over a number of years.

The survey is a nonprofit, nonpartisan governmental research organization with offices in Jefferson City.

$500,000 in bonds awarded for new plant

The City Council Tuesday awarded $500,000 worth of bonds for the new Sikeston water treatment plant to an investment group led by the firm of Reinholdt & Gardner.

More than half the bonds had been sold by this morning. Mikell Kilgore, the broker handling the Reinholdt & Gardner account in Sikeston, said he expected three- quarters of the bonds to be gone by 11 a.m.

He said the early maturities are gone and no maturity dates earlier than 1985 are available. The bonds are sold in $5,000 increments.

"They're hotter than a firecracker," Kilgore said. "My phone has been ringing all morning."

The bonds themselves will not be printed for a few weeks yet, Kilgore said, but the orders being taken are firm.

The city will get its $500,000 after the bonds are signed, Kilgore added.

Reinholdt & Gardner was one of three groups of investors bidding. Bid offers were sent to 75 bonding houses.

Under the firm's bid, Sikeston will pay an average 6.72 per cent interest through 1995, with a total accrued interest of $441,237.

The Reinholdt & Garner bid included the firms of Newhard, Cook & Co. and McLiney & Co.

Stern Bros. & Co. bid an average 6.95 per cent interest as part of a group consisting of George K. Baum & Inc., Harry Adams & Louis, Inc., and First National Bank of Sikeston.

E. F. Hutton & Co. and Stifel Nicolaus & Co., both bid an average 6.97 per cent interest.

The bonds will pay for a water treatment plant which will double the city's water supply. The plant, to be located near the city steam plant, is expected to be completed this year.

Contracts were awarded earlier this month to three firms for the building, the wells and the mechanical equipment.

City Manager Charles Church said that if the costs should be too much higher than the $500,000, the city can issue another $100,000 in bonds.

City voters authorized a $600,000 bond issue in November 1974 to pay for the plant. The bonds will be repaid from higher water rates.

SeMo escapee caught

ST. LOUIS — A Southeast Missouri man who escaped from federal authorities Monday morning was recaptured Tuesday night by St. Louis County police detectives.

Alvin Cluck, 31, of Malden is presently being held in the St. Louis County jail. Jack French of St. Louis, special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation who supervised the search for Cluck, said the U.S. Attorney's office in St. Louis will make a decision later on whether to prosecute the prisoner for the escape.

Cluck escaped after being admitted as as a patient at St. Louis County Hospital in Clayton. He had reportedly contacted infectious hepatitis while in the medium security facility at Gumbo in St. Louis County, where he was serving a sentence for a federal weapons violation.

French said that Cluck apparently is suffering from the sickness, so will probably be returned to the hospital for treatment.

St. Louis County detectives stopped Cluck in a car with two other persons Tuesday night. Cluck denied his identity to the officers, who were about to release the vehicle and its occupants when a check of the names through the National Crime Information Center computer revealed no information.

Before releasing the car, however, the detectives checked the license plate of the car,which matched one entered by the FBI as one which Cluck might be using.

Cluck continued to deny his identity, but officers checked his tattoos, which matched the description of the escaped

3 legislators favor temporary bridge plan

Three area legislators have come out in favor of a proposal to put a temporary bridge across the St. Francis River at Fisk, but engineers of the Missouri State Highway Department district office in Sikeston are apparently cool to the idea.

The proposal to have Army engineers from Ft. Leonard Wood and the Missouri National Guard throw a temporary span across the river until a new bridge can be completed was made last week by former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Charleston.

The bridge collapsed in December when it was struck by a tractor- trailer truck.

State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, D-Hornersville, and State Rep. O. L. Wallis, R-Poplar Bluff, have issued statements supporting the Hearnes plan.

Both men said the closing of Highway 60 has created severe economic hardships for

INDUSTRY DOES IT BETTER

One of the mass- produced wall calendars for 1976 carries, on its list of Memorable Dates: "January 14, 1914; Henry Ford starts assembly line production of the automobile." There are some around still young enough to remember the original, and justifiably famous, "Model T" Ford — the first mass produced "horseless carriage" in history.

Henry Ford was not the first to invent the automobile. In fact, manyothers had pioneered the field for years. The very first true "auto" was invented and built by a Frenchman, Nicholas Cognet of Lorraine, in 1769. A steam-powered tricycle affair, it would run for 20 minutes, carrying four people, at a little over two miles per hour. After a "rest" of twenty minutes, it would build up enough power to travel another two-thirds of a mile — more or less. It was an Austrian, Siegfried Marcus, who built the first gasoline powered car. Marcus was actually looking for a source of light when he experimented with a mixture of gasoline and air, ignited by a steam of sparks. The chemical reaction was so great that Marcus quickly realized that he had discovered a source of power, not light. With the aid of a primitive two-cycle engine, Marcus was able to propel his horseless carriage for a distance of 20 yards. But, in 1898, he declared,with what may now be seen as some lack of vision: "The automobile is a senseless waste of time and effort."

Nor had Henry Ford invented "mass production." It was an American inventor, Jeremiah Wilkinson, who, in 1776, invented the "jig" which makes it possible to exactly duplicate the same item, over and over. And the idea of interchangeable parts was already used in the U.S. armories at Springfield, Massachusetts and at Harpers Ferry.

But it remained for Henry Ford to "put it all together" — which he did, with the help of some far-sighted businessmen who invested the initial $100,000 and enabled Henry Ford to build his first car, at Highland Park,Michigan, in the year 1903.

We have come a long way since the "Tin Lizzie," but today, the same as yesterday, it remains for the true "visionaries" in our society, the business leaders, to provide the means whereby we all enjoy a better life and a better world.

CAN WE BE PROUD?

We're just about to finish two hundred years of American history. Are we going to be proud of our last few years? Crime is greater today than ever in history. There seems to be no rules for life with dress for the leading people similar to that of what the poorest had to wear when we were a boy. Marriage is seemingly not the goal of young people as last year there was one divorce for every two marriages. Today you hear no immoral talk about unmarried couples living together. Deserters from our armed forces and those who refused their country's call, have been welcomed home and forgiven. A President of the United States has resigned to prevent being impeached. Our national debt is growing tremendously, year by year, when there was no debt at the end of the first century. Sunday we listened to several of the mayors of America's largest cities tell what was the matter. Among their explanations were "suspended sentences, paroles, low bonds, and general lack of making a criminal pay for his misdeeds." It is quite likely we won't be here for the sesqui-centennial, but we would like to see 1976 a year to look back on with pride. We feel we have been going downhill the last eight years, and if Congress gives away the Panama Canasl, as a strong effort is being made for such a tragedy, our next 100 years will likely find a Communist move northward from that invaluable possession.

The tax is probably needed, but--

JAWS AND MORE JAWS

From The Wall Street Journal

We read that a "Jaws II" is in the works, as well as a movie entitled "Claws" about a ferocious bear in Yellowstone Park and "Piranha" about a killer fish in a Beverly Hills swimming pool. There are also rumors about authors trying to peddle stories about crazed crocodiles and vicious alligators.

We have rather enjoyed the recent preoccupation with sharks, if only as a diversion from capital formation, inflation, crowding out and other problems.

But it was probably too much to hope that there wasn't a fly in the ointment somewhere. A Florida marine biologist, for example, recently complained that "Jaws" maligns the man-eating shark, which attacks not because it wants to eat man but because it wants to communicate with him. And a Chicago zoo director, who says that only a couple of decades ago Hollywood was making monkeys out of hairy great apes, waxed sympathetically about the integrity, grace and design of sharks, about the way they look after their young.

Actually, we don't for a minute question the parental affection of sharks, nor do we have anything against bridging the communications gap, although all things being equal we'd prefer to do so at a distance. Still, let's not go overboard with all this recent revisionism. We don't advocate suppressing the good news about sharks. But it would surely be a shame if the current consensus about them—that they are potentially hazardous to one's health—were shattered by a controversy. The prevailing view of sharks is one of the few things Americans have agreed upon in many years.

RECORD OF SUCCESS

Generally, the press does not praise an individual, organization or professin unless they deserve it. Therefore, when the San Francisco, California, Examiner wrote that, "The qulity of medical care in this country was never better (than at present), the standard of medical practice never higher, the population never healthier ...." it was truly a significant accolade. These were hardly idle words carelessly thrown about. To find the truth in that statement,one only has to look t the increased life expectancy of people in this country and some of the medical break troughs made in the past geneation or two.

According to figures of the National Center for Health Statistics, life expectancy in 1972 reached an all-time high of 71.2 years. Contrast this with 1909, when a newborn child was expectd tolive only 49 years. This means that a baby born tday may be expectd tolive almost a quarter of a century longer than one born 65 years ago. At the same time, the infant mortality rate has continued to decline. In 1972 , the death rate mong infants was 18.2 per 1,000 live births, as opposed to 19.2 in 1971 and 19.8 in 1970. Neither the increased life expectancy nor the declining death rate among infants would have been possible without the progress which has been made in controlling once deadly diseases. The medical profession, using new techniques, equipment and pharmaceutical products, has been able to conquer or control diphtheia, smallpox, typhoid, mesles, tuber culosis, pneumonia, polio, veneral diease and deal with a geat variety of himan ills that were beyond the physicians's ability to treat a generation ago.

The satement by the Examiner and these statistics are most important. They come at a time when critics of the medical professon and certain legislators have campaigned for a drastic overhaul of the present U. S. health care system. They show that the majority of Americns are receiving better medicl cre than ever before and living longer because of it. This shuld also be an indication that radical change is about the last thing that wuld benefit the American eople. Improvements in U. S. medicine can be made, but theymust come by building on the strengths of the system that is aleady serving us so well.

WHERE DO SMALL INVESTORS GO?

The nervousness on Wall Street can be sensed behind the announcement of the Twentieth Century Fund of New York of a "major study" to find out why individual investors are leaving the stock market.

Two professors at Pennsylvania's Wharton School, Irwin Friend and Marshall E. Blume, plan to spend two years trying to learn what makes small investors dischanted and what the effects of their exodus may be.

It really shouldn't take two years. Robert Metz, investment columnist for The New York Times, put it simply and forthrightly in Memphisthe other day. Speaking before the Economic Club of Memphis, Metz said any small investor could have done just as well putting his money in a savings institution as into stock. In fact, he said, the "little guy" could have made more that way in recent years. But even thenhe could not have beaten inflation.

The depressing view by a close observer of the stock market was accompanied by some advice: Don't get into the market at this time. Noting that the market has been "abysmally bad" for people who have been in it for the past 12 yeas, Metz said, "We ought to ask ourselves if the stock market is any place to be."

Perhaps the Wharton professors will come up with some more concise explantions for what is happening at a time when profits are healthy but th emarket is dragging. But, as Metz observed, the immediate problem is too serious to ignore, and smlll investors are not inclined to watch their savings depreciate while studies are being made to explain it.And without steady new investment by all those "little guys," businesses may be heading for a shortage of capital for expansion and modernization. The question is: Where can the small investor go?

It's one more manifestation of the seriousness of the current inflation problem, and the need for effective economic action on the federal level.

HAIR OF THE DOG?

From the Miami Herald

Out in San Francisco, where a lot of strange endeavors are launched, a cottage industry has sprung up wherein dog hair is used to make sweaters, scarves, skirts and the like. The entrepreneuser suggest that 20 dogs can make a mount of hair and that it ought not to go to waste. an appreciator of this development says there is something "esthetically pleasing" about wearing something made from one's own dog's hair.

Many of us have been doing this for some time, with a fuzzy patina of surplus canine hair magnetically attached to our attire, especially the blue serge suits. There is also the suspicion that only one dog is required for a mount of hair. Whatever esthetic pleasures there are in this apply only if one wishes his clothing to match the dog hair adorning his sofa, his rugs and , on a good day for the dog, his cat.

THE TWO SIDES OF PROGROSS

From a speech by Russell Peterson

Chairman, Council On Environmental Quality

The .Aswan Dam in Egypt controlled the annual flooding of the Nile, permitted year-round irrigation that brought in four crops a year instead of one, and generated 4 billion kilowatts hours of power annually.

On the minus side, it has eliminated siltation that formerly renewed the land, so that Egyptian farmers need larger and larger amounts of fertilizers; it has reduced fish-harvest along the Nile; it has eroded the Egyptian coast-line; it has interrupted the flow of nutrients into the Delta, with the consequent destruction of sardine fisheries; and it has produced phenomenal blooms of a weed which, ultimately, sustains a parasitic worm that causes disease in man. That disease is now epidemic in Egypt.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Colson: The Watergate Years

with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The first member of Richard Nixon's tight inner circle to reach print, Charles "Chuck" Colson, has described what it was like inside the oval office during the Watergate years.

He has completed a compelling book called "Born Again," which is loaded with inside stories about Nixon, Spiro Agnew, Henry Kissinger, and other headline figures from the incredible Nixon era. We have obtained a bootleg copy of the book, which hasn't yet hit the bookstands.

Colson portrays Nixon as a shy, haunted man who got down on his knees at night to pray, yet a vicious, vindictive man who was eager to stomp on his enemies. Colson also traces his own astonishing transformation from a ruthless political hatchet man to a zealous Christian.

Here are a few of the book's most startling revelations:

-- As the specter of impeachment began to haunt Nixon, he became paranoid and suspected a conspiracy against him. He feared the special prosecutors were wiretapping the White Housse. He even came to believe his own aides and secretaries might be conspiring to bug him.

Once he took Colson to the Lincoln sitting room on the second floor of the White House to thwart the suspected eavesdroppers. "The problem, Chuck," he confided, "is that I don't think I can trust anybody. Not even the secretaries."

The thought so preyed on Nixon that he called Colson at 11:30 that night. "Let me ask you one more time..." the President pleaded, "do you have some information (about the White House being bugged) that you didn't tell me?"

It turned out, ironically, that Nixon bugged himself and provided the prosecutors with the damning transcripts that brought his own downfall. But the President blamed his major domo, H.R. "Bob" Haldeman, for this. Speaking to Colson later about the White House recording system, Nixon said: "They were all Haldeman's idea. Stupid, just stupid. I told Bob twice to have the system removed, but you know Bob. I forgot all about them."

– The beleaguered Nixon once told Colson he had considered becoming a Roman Catholic. But he added..: "If I converted, everyone would say it was some political gimmick – Tricky Dick making a pitch for the Catholic vote."

But Nixon told Colson earnestly: "You know, Chuck, I get on my knees every night and just pray to God." When Colson spoke to then Senator Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, the Senator asked Colson to invite Nixon to join them in their prayer circle. But Nixon, partly out of shyness, declined.

– After Colson had served seven months in prison, he had a trauma in his family. Senator Hughes, Rep. Al Quie, R-Minn., and two other prayer group members offered to serve out Colson's term under an antiquated statute.

Quie was ready to go to the White House with the substitution plan when Colson was unexpectedly released by Judge Gerhard Gesell.

-- The ugly side of Nixon's nature showed itself on the presidential yacht Sequoia one balmy spring night. The President's staff began to talk about his enemies.

"One day we will get them," he vowed, "we'll get them on the ground where we want them. And we'll stick our heels in, step on them hard and twist – right, Chuck, right?"

Listening solemnly to this Presidential diatribe were Kissinger, Haldeman, and John Ehrlichman. Only Ehrlichman looked away in apparent disagreement, Colson reports.

– This vengeful side of Nixon came out again when Daniel Ellsberg leaked the Pentagon Papers. "I want him exposed, Chuck," said Nixon. "I don't care how you do it ... do you understand me? That's an order." Colson eagerly worked to discredit Ellsberg.

– Perhaps the most important news story in the book is Colson's confirmation that Nixon planned to pardon every one of his aides caught in the Waergate web.

Colson recalls he was helping Nixon with his coat one day when the President, obviously referring to his embattled aides, promised: "There'll come a time when we wipe the slate clean. Not yet but it will come."

Instead, only Nixon wound up with a pardon.

-- Another promise that Nixon was unable to keep, according to Colson, was given to ex-Treasury Secretary John Connally when he switched to the Republican party. Nixon offered to support him for President. Nixon's intention was, first, to replace Agnew with Connally on the 1972 ticket, then to back Connally for the 1976 presidential nomination.

But Agnew had too strong a following to be dislodged in 1972. And by the time Agnew was forced out a year later, Connally was under investigation in the famous milk bribery case.

As the noose tightened on Agnew in 1973, his aides sought to engineer impeachment actions against him in the House. The strategy was to short-circuit and possibly avert criminal prosecution. But Nixon undercut his own Vice President telling Colson: "Both Jerry Ford (then House Republican leader) and Carl Albert (House Speaker) are in line. They will oppose any impeachment resolution." Colson had to tell Agnew that the President had scuttled him.

– A section of the Watergate tapes, which apparently hasn't appeared until now, is quoted by Colson. He is on the record a few days after the Watergate break-in urging Nixon to have all the White House personnel testify freely.

"This is once when you'd like for people to testify," Colson contended. Nixon refused to heed his advice, and the Watergate coverup began.

Footnote: We have made repeated calls to San Clemente for Nixon's comments. But he has offered no response.

Inside Labor

Ford Will Out?

Dunlop Set to Assist Democratic Paraty's unique Liberal-Labor 'Shadow Cabinet'

WASHINGTON — Any self-respecting time machine, adjusted to August 1976 would disclose the retiring Secretary of Labor John T. Dunlop stepping out of Harvard's ivy shadows into the Democratic presidential nominee's shadow cabinet. This is a British invention which gives the out-of-office opposition leader an out-of-office unofficial group of fixed advisers all ready to step into the cabinet posts the moment their leader wins the premiership.

So Dean Dunlop quit not out of dislike for Jerry Ford; not out of pique over the President's veto of common situs but out of sheer "disgust" with Mr. Ford's isolated economic advisers who daily isolated the frustrated professor politically, philosophically and econometrically.

Some of his intimates say he became so "disgusted" with the conservatives, epitomized by Alan Greenspan, head of the Council of Economic Advisers, and even the White House's economic chief of staff, Bill Scidman, that he (Dunlop) virtually stopped attending the daily economic executive policy committee skull sessions.

The clash had to come. There was as sharp a disagreement as any since Lincoln glared down on Douglas. It's positively accurate to report that a somewhat naive President Ford was startled by the fireworks sizzling between Dunlop and his (Ford's) own economic advisers. President Ford was startled by the intensity of labor's revolt against the picketing veto. Erroneously Mr. Ford thought he could mix whiskey and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Mr. Ford is a conservative. His cabinet is conservative. He tried a little tilting to the left. He attempted to assuage labor chief George Meany – who operates on two levels, the philosophical and the political. But deep in Mr. Ford's heart he should have known this couldn't be done.

Dr. Dunlop, author of a series of liberal volumes on labor economics, wanted action now. More immediately for stimulation of the private economy. Get up the mechanism and money for millions of private sector jobs. Write it, now, into the State of the Union speech.

Dunlop, in fact, was updating Franklin Roosevelt, simulating Jack Kennedy, calling up the Lyndon Johnson ghost, sprinkling it all with heavy doses of Keynes spending and wrapping it all up in the traditional Dunlop neat package technique.

Instead, as he, and I, were told, there would be little new in the State of the Union speech. Perhaps a suggestion of worker participation in industry through stock purchase arrangements.

And I was informed by one who comes as close to effectively influencing Mr. Ford as anyone in this nation that "the President will hold fast to the nothing-new program, no initiatives, except for a few jiggles on Medicare and Medicaid."

Further, Dr. Dunlop displayed some uncharacteristic innocence. One early morning not too long ago he took his chair at the daily Economic Policy Board executive committee White House session expecting discussions of taxes, smashing of bottlenecks on vast nuclear power projects, national economic sweeps, etc.

But that morning a Washington daily carried a column discussing Ronald Reagan and Jerry Ford – the column, its political impact and the economics which could hurt Mr. Ford were discussed for most of the hour or so allotted to economic braintrusting. This "disturbed" Dr. Dunlop. He's a professional braintruster. So he should have known that the President's men are braintrusting for the President – especially as the country rushes into the campaign.

Thus there had to be a basic disagreement on how to speed up national recovery and cut unemployment. Nor was it all a matter of spending more money. There were matters of basic economic policy and movement; on speeding of super construction and licenses and environment – the whole thing.

Further there is no certainty that in a few months the men around Mr. Ford won't be limping ducks. Powerless, even if they agreed on anything with Jack Dunlop, to launch any new programs.

One of the cabinet's most powerful men, on whil Mr. Ford leans heavily and talks with almost daily, told me the President has said he positively would pull a Rockefeller if he (Ford) lost a few primaries. And "we expect the President to lose to Reagan in Florida." I have absolute reason to believe that the President told this to my source.

So Dean Dunlop decided to quit long before the actual veto. He rode the Washington-Detroit-Pittsburgh circuit talking with leaders of the auto and steel unions and major corporations. And in effect, as I reported some days ago, he told them he would quit on the night of Jan. 13. There's much more here than labor-management activity in which he'll keep his finger anyway.

This is the development of the British-type shadow cabinet, the phenomenon of pre-naming departmental secretaries. Actually it began during the 1968 campaign. Dick Nixon, long before his election, was advised on labor by George Shultz and on foreign policy by Henry Kissinger. Dunlop was in the shadowy Hubert Humphrey shadow cabinet. In 1972, Sen. McGovern, for example, had M.I.T. Prof. Edwin Kuh, who borrowed the idea of the $1,000-a-person giveaway from a young scholar, and doctored it up for McGovern.

Well, President Ford should have known better than to have diluted his conservatives, especially with Dr. Dunlop's prescriptions. Or to have expected political mercy from Meany. To each his own. That way America has a choice.

INDUSTRY DOES IT BETTER

One of the mass- produced wall calendars for 1976 carries, on its list of Memorable Dates: "January 14, 1914; Henry Ford starts assembly line production of the automobile." There are some around still young enough to remember the original, and justifiably famous, "Model T" Ford — the first mass produced "horseless carriage" in history.

Henry Ford was not the first to invent the automobile. In fact, manyothers had pioneered the field for years. The very first true "auto" was invented and built by a Frenchman, Nicholas Cognet of Lorraine, in 1769. A steam-powered tricycle affair, it would run for 20 minutes, carrying four people, at a little over two miles per hour. After a "rest" of twenty minutes, it would build up enough power to travel another two-thirds of a mile — more or less. It was an Austrian, Siegfried Marcus, who built the first gasoline powered car. Marcus was actually looking for a source of light when he experimented with a mixture of gasoline and air, ignited by a steam of sparks. The chemical reaction was so great that Marcus quickly realized that he had discovered a source of power, not light. With the aid of a primitive two-cycle engine, Marcus was able to propel his horseless carriage for a distance of 20 yards. But, in 1898, he declared,with what may now be seen as some lack of vision: "The automobile is a senseless waste of time and effort."

Nor had Henry Ford invented "mass production." It was an American inventor, Jeremiah Wilkinson, who, in 1776, invented the "jig" which makes it possible to exactly duplicate the same item, over and over. And the idea of interchangeable parts was already used in the U.S. armories at Springfield, Massachusetts and at Harpers Ferry.

But it remained for Henry Ford to "put it all together" — which he did, with the help of some far-sighted businessmen who invested the initial $100,000 and enabled Henry Ford to build his first car, at Highland Park,Michigan, in the year 1903.

We have come a long way since the "Tin Lizzie," but today, the same as yesterday, it remains for the true "visionaries" in our society, the business leaders, to provide the means whereby we all enjoy a better life and a better world.

According to figures of the National Center for Health Statistics, life expectancy in 1972 reached an all-time high of 71.2 years. Contrast this with 1909, when a newborn child was expectd tolive only 49 years. This means that a baby born tday may be expectd tolive almost a quarter of a century longer than one born 65 years ago. At the same time, the infant mortality rate has continued to decline. In 1972 , the death rate mong infants was 18.2 per 1,000 live births, as opposed to 19.2 in 1971 and 19.8 in 1970. Neither the increased life expectancy nor the declining death rate among infants would have been possible without the progress which has been made in controlling once deadly diseases. The medical profession, using new techniques, equipment and pharmaceutical products, has been able to conquer or control diphtheia, smallpox, typhoid, mesles, tuber culosis, pneumonia, polio, veneral diease and deal with a geat variety of himan ills that were beyond the physicians's ability to treat a generation ago.

The satement by the Examiner and these statistics are most important. They come at a time when critics of the medical professon and certain legislators have campaigned for a drastic overhaul of the present U. S. health care system. They show that the majority of Americns are receiving better medicl cre than ever before and living longer because of it. This shuld also be an indication that radical change is about the last thing that wuld benefit the American eople. Improvements in U. S. medicine can be made, but theymust come by building on the strengths of the system that is aleady serving us so well.

WHERE DO SMALL INVESTORS GO?

The nervousness on Wall Street can be sensed behind the announcement of the Twentieth Century Fund of New York of a "major study" to find out why individual investors are leaving the stock market.

Two professors at Pennsylvania's Wharton School, Irwin Friend and Marshall E. Blume, plan to spend two years trying to learn what makes small investors dischanted and what the effects of their exodus may be.

It really shouldn't take two years. Robert Metz, investment columnist for The New York Times, put it simply and forthrightly in Memphisthe other day. Speaking before the Economic Club of Memphis, Metz said any small investor could have done just as well putting his money in a savings institution as into stock. In fact, he said, the "little guy" could have made more that way in recent years. But even thenhe could not have beaten inflation.

The depressing view by a close observer of the stock market was accompanied by some advice: Don't get into the market at this time. Noting that the market has been "abysmally bad" for people who have been in it for the past 12 yeas, Metz said, "We ought to ask ourselves if the stock market is any place to be."

Perhaps the Wharton professors will come up with some more concise explantions for what is happening at a time when profits are healthy but th emarket is dragging. But, as Metz observed, the immediate problem is too serious to ignore, and smlll investors are not inclined to watch their savings depreciate while studies are being made to explain it.And without steady new investment by all those "little guys," businesses may be heading for a shortage of capital for expansion and modernization. The question is: Where can the small investor go?

It's one more manifestation of the seriousness of the current inflation problem, and the need for effective economic action on the federal level.

HAIR OF THE DOG?

From the Miami Herald

Out in San Francisco, where a lot of strange endeavors are launched, a cottage industry has sprung up wherein dog hair is used to make sweaters, scarves, skirts and the like. The entrepreneuser suggest that 20 dogs can make a mount of hair and that it ought not to go to waste. an appreciator of this development says there is something "esthetically pleasing" about wearing something made from one's own dog's hair.

Many of us have been doing this for some time, with a fuzzy patina of surplus canine hair magnetically attached to our attire, especially the blue serge suits. There is also the suspicion that only one dog is required for a mount of hair. Whatever esthetic pleasures there are in this apply only if one wishes his clothing to match the dog hair adorning his sofa, his rugs and , on a good day for the dog, his cat.

THE TWO SIDES OF PROGROSS

From a speech by Russell Peterson
Chairman, Council On Environmental Quality

The .Aswan Dam in Egypt controlled the annual flooding of the Nile, permitted year-round irrigation that brought in four crops a year instead of one, and generated 4 billion kilowatts hours of power annually.

On the minus side, it has eliminated siltation that formerly renewed the land, so that Egyptian farmers need larger and larger amounts of fertilizers; it has reduced fish-harvest along the Nile; it has eroded the Egyptian coast-line; it has interrupted the flow of nutrients into the Delta, with the consequent destruction of sardine fisheries; and it has produced phenomenal blooms of a weed which, ultimately, sustains a parasitic worm that causes disease in man. That disease is now epidemic in Egypt.

Ford Will Out?

WASHINGTON — Any self-respecting time machine, adjusted to August 1976 would disclose the retiring Secretary of Labor John T. Dunlop stepping out of Harvard's ivy shadows into the Democratic presidential nominee's shadow cabinet. This is a British invention which gives the out-of-office opposition leader an out-of-office unofficial group of fixed advisers all ready to step into the cabinet posts the moment their leader wins the premiership.

So Dean Dunlop quit not out of dislike for Jerry Ford; not out of pique over the President's veto of common situs but out of sheer "disgust" with Mr. Ford's isolated economic advisers who daily isolated the frustrated professor politically, philosophically and econometrically.

Some of his intimates say he became so "disgusted" with the conservatives, epitomized by Alan Greenspan, head of the Council of Economic Advisers, and even the White House's economic chief of staff, Bill Seidman, that he (Dunlop) virtually stopped attending the daily economic executive policy committee skull sessions.

The clash had to come. There was as sharp a disagreement as any since Lincoln glared down on Douglas. It's positively accurate to report that a somewhat naive President Ford was startled by the fireworks sizzling between Dunlop and his (Ford's) own economic advisers. President Ford was startled by the intensity of labor's revolt against the picketing veto. Erroneously Mr. Ford thought he could mix whiskey and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Mr. Ford is a conservative. His cabinet is conservative. He tried a little tilting to the left. He attempted to assuage labor chief George Meany – who operates on two levels, the philosophical and the political. But deep in Mr. Ford's heart he should have known this couldn't be done.

Dr. Dunlop, author of a series of liberal volumes on labor economics, wanted action now. More immediately for stimulation of the private economy. Get up the mechanism and money for millions of private sector jobs. Write it, now, into the State of the Union speech.

Dunlop, in fact, was updating Franklin Roosevelt, simulating Jack Kennedy, calling up the Lyndon Johnson ghost, sprinkling it all with heavy doses of Keynes spending and wrapping it all up in the traditional Dunlop neat package technique.

Instead, as he, and I, were told, there would be little new in the State of the Union speech. Perhaps a suggestion of worker participation in industry through stock purchase arrangements.

And I was informed by one who comes as close to effectively influencing Mr. Ford as anyone in this nation that "the President will hold fast to the nothing-new program, no initiatives, except for a few jiggles on Medicare and Medicaid."

Further, Dr. Dunlop displayed some uncharacteristic innocence. One early morning not too long ago he took his chair at the daily Economic Policy Board executive committee White House session expecting discussions of taxes, smashing of bottlenecks on vast nuclear power projects, national economic sweeps, etc.

But that morning a Washington daily carried a column discussing Ronald Reagan and Jerry Ford – the column, its political impact and the economics which could hurt Mr. Ford were discussed for most of the hour or so allotted to economic braintrusting. This "disturbed" Dr. Dunlop. He's a professional braintruster. So he should have known that the President's men are braintrusting for the President – especially as the country rushes into the campaign.

Thus there had to be a basic disagreement on how to speed up national recovery and cut unemployment. Nor was it all a matter of spending more money. There were matters of basic economic policy and movement; on speeding of super construction and licenses and environment – the whole thing.

Further there is no certainty that in a few months the men around Mr. Ford won't be limping ducks. Powerless, even if they agreed on anything with Jack Dunlop, to launch any new programs.

One of the cabinet's most powerful men, on whil Mr. Ford leans heavily and talks with almost daily, told me the President has said he positively would pull a Rockefeller if he (Ford) lost a few primaries. And "we expect the President to lose to Reagan in Florida." I have absolute reason to believe that the President told this to my source.

So Dean Dunlop decided to quit long before the actual veto. He rode the Washington-Detroit-Pittsburgh circuit talking with leaders of the auto and steel unions and major corporations. And in effect, as I reported some days ago, he told them he would quit on the night of Jan. 13. There's much more here than labor-management activity in which he'll keep his finger anyway.

This is the development of the British-type shadow cabinet, the phenomenon of pre-naming departmental secretaries. Actually it began during the 1968 campaign. Dick Nixon, long before his election, was advised on labor by George Shultz and on foreign policy by Henry Kissinger. Dunlop was in the shadowy Hubert Humphrey shadow cabinet. In 1972, Sen. McGovern, for example, had M.I.T. Prof. Edwin Kuh, who borrowed the idea of the $1,000-a-person giveaway from a young scholar, and doctored it up for McGovern.

Well, President Ford should have known better than to have diluted his conservatives, especially with Dr. Dunlop's prescriptions. Or to have expected political mercy from Meany. To each his own. That way America has a choice.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Colson: The Watergate Years
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The first member of Richard Nixon's tight inner circle to reach print, Charles "Chuck" Colson, has described what it was like inside the oval office during the Watergate years.

He has completed a compelling book called "Born Again," which is loaded with inside stories about Nixon, Spiro Agnew, Henry Kissinger, and other headline figures from the incredible Nixon era. We have obtained a bootleg copy of the book, which hasn't yet hit the bookstands.

Colson portrays Nixon as a shy, haunted man who got down on his knees at night to pray, yet a vicious, vindictive man who was eager to stomp on his enemies. Colson also traces his own astonishing transformation from a ruthless political hatchet man to a zealous Christian.

Here are a few of the book's most startling revelations:

-- As the specter of impeachment began to haunt Nixon, he became paranoid and suspected a conspiracy against him. He feared the special prosecutors were wiretapping the White Housse. He even came to believe his own aides and secretaries might be conspiring to bug him.

Once he took Colson to the Lincoln sitting room on the second floor of the White House to thwart the suspected eavesdroppers. "The problem, Chuck," he confided, "is that I don't think I can trust anybody. Not even the secretaries."

The thought so preyed on Nixon that he called Colson at 11:30 that night. "Let me ask you one more time..." the President pleaded, "do you have some information (about the White House being bugged) that you didn't tell me?"

It turned out, ironically, that Nixon bugged himself and provided the prosecutors with the damning transcripts that brought his own downfall. But the President blamed his major domo, H.R. "Bob" Haldeman, for this. Speaking to Colson later about the White House recording system, Nixon said: "They were all Haldeman's idea. Stupid, just stupid. I told Bob twice to have the system removed, but you know Bob. I forgot all about them."

– The beleaguered Nixon once told Colson he had considered becoming a Roman Catholic. But he added..: "If I converted, everyone would say it was some political gimmick – Tricky Dick making a pitch for the Catholic vote."

But Nixon told Colson earnestly: "You know, Chuck, I get on my knees every night and just pray to God." When Colson spoke to then Senator Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, the Senator asked Colson to invite Nixon to join them in their prayer circle. But Nixon, partly out of shyness, declined.

– After Colson had served seven months in prison, he had a trauma in his family. Senator Hughes, Rep. Al Quie, R-Minn., and two other prayer group members offered to serve out Colson's term under an antiquated statute.

Quie was ready to go to the White House with the substitution plan when Colson was unexpectedly released by Judge Gerhard Gesell.

-- The ugly side of Nixon's nature showed itself on the presidential yacht Sequoia one balmy spring night. The President's staff began to talk about his enemies.

"One day we will get them," he vowed, "we'll get them on the ground where we want them. And we'll stick our heels in, step on them hard and twist – right, Chuck, right?"

Listening solemnly to this Presidential diatribe were Kissinger, Haldeman, and John Ehrlichman. Only Ehrlichman looked away in apparent disagreement, Colson reports.

– This vengeful side of Nixon came out again when Daniel Ellsberg leaked the Pentagon Papers. "I want him exposed, Chuck," said Nixon. "I don't care how you do it ... do you understand me? That's an order." Colson eagerly worked to discredit Ellsberg.

– Perhaps the most important news story in the book is Colson's confirmation that Nixon planned to pardon every one of his aides caught in the Waergate web.

Colson recalls he was helping Nixon with his coat one day when the President, obviously referring to his embattled aides, promised: "There'll come a time when we wipe the slate clean. Not yet but it will come."

Instead, only Nixon wound up with a pardon.

-- Another promise that Nixon was unable to keep, according to Colson, was given to ex-Treasury Secretary John Connally when he switched to the Republican party. Nixon offered to support him for President. Nixon's intention was, first, to replace Agnew with Connally on the 1972 ticket, then to back Connally for the 1976 presidential nomination.

But Agnew had too strong a following to be dislodged in 1972. And by the time Agnew was forced out a year later, Connally was under investigation in the famous milk bribery case.

As the noose tightened on Agnew in 1973, his aides sought to engineer impeachment actions against him in the House. The strategy was to short-circuit and possibly avert criminal prosecution. But Nixon undercut his own Vice President telling Colson: "Both Jerry Ford (then House Republican leader) and Carl Albert (House Speaker) are in line. They will oppose any impeachment resolution." Colson had to tell Agnew that the President had scuttled him.

– A section of the Watergate tapes, which apparently hasn't appeared until now, is quoted by Colson. He is on the record a few days after the Watergate break-in urging Nixon to have all the White House personnel testify freely.

"This is once when you'd like for people to testify," Colson contended. Nixon refused to heed his advice, and the Watergate coverup began.

Footnote: We have made repeated calls to San Clemente for Nixon's comments. But he has offered no response.

FDA prohibits dye

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concern over a possible link to cancer is prompting the Food and Drug Administration to ban Red Dye No. 2, one of the most widely used dyes for foods, drugs and cosmetics.

FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said Monday that the ban, to take effect within the next few days, will not require recall of products already on the market which contain the coloring.

But manufacturers of the dye say the ban may not prove to be popular with consumers.

Jerome Kinnison of the Warner+Jenkinson Manufacturing Co., a subsidiary of the 7-Up Corp., said many manufacturers who use Red No. 2 will change to other dyes, but the color of their products will be different.

"Some favorite foods that have been popular for 50 years will be considerably less attractive and others will ... cease to exist because the public won't buy them," he said.

The FDA's action followed a review, completed at the end of last year, of all scientific studies of Red No. 2 — including evidence that high dosages of the dye when fed to rats can lead to an increase in cancerous tumors.

"Clearly, the burden of proof belongs not with the government or the consumer, but with those who claim that Red No. 2 has a safe and useful purpose in the food supply and in our drugs and cosmetics," Schmidt said.

However, he added that there was "no evidence of a public health hazard from any currently available food or other product made with Red No. 2."

More than one million pounds of Red Dye No. 2 have been used annually in recent years to give artificially flavored soft drinks a rich cherry or strawberry color, to make maraschino cherries red rather than natural gold and to color-code certain drug tablets.

In recent years, more and more food manufacturers have been switching to Red No. 40 in candy, soda pop, cereals, cough medicines, cake frostings and lipsticks. That dye is considered safe by the FDA.

Children who fear rape can get help

Dear Ann Landers: We want to thank you for printing two letters from adolescent females who wrote in about sexual abuse they were receiving from family members. This type of incident is tragic and on the rise. Alternatives are now available for desperate youngsters who don't know what to do and cannot get support from other family members.

Addressing specifics from "Afraid of the Future," we'd like to point out that (1) a chain-locked door affords little protection from a determined assailant, (2) the child had already taken the steps a 14-year-old could be expected to take, and (3) a 14-year-old is still a child and needs, deserves and is legally entitled to protection by her mother-father and society against all persons who may abuse her-him.

The actions of the uncle in your most recent letter constitute child abuse and criminal assault under most states' laws. The mother's do-nothing response constitutes child neglect. At a minimum, the actions of this mother should have been to demand the house key from her brother and to make it very clear that he would not be welcome unless she was home.

If parents are unwilling to protect their children from a molester-relative, the child should seek outside help from a Rape Crisis center in her area, a school counselor, the clergy or another adult family member who can be trusted. If none of these work, the Child Protection Agency or police should be called. – Jane Leeson, Program Director, Rape Crisis Alliance, Boise, Idaho

Dear Jane Leeson: I view this column as an opportunity to educate people and you gave me a great assist today. Thank you very much.

Dear AnnLanders: I can't be the only person in the world with this pet gripe. Perhaps if you print my letter in the paper people who are guilty of causing the problem might recognize themselves and stop. It would be a national blessing. I refer to individuals who chew on the ice in their drinks.

I actually quit going with a man who wanted to marry me because he did this. (He was rich, too.) Mr. Jawbreaker would order a Scotch on the rocks and for 20 minutes I'd hear "ca-runch -- chomp -- ca-runch." It drove me bananas. I thought for sure he must be eating the glass. I never said anything. I simply stopped seeing him and he never knew why. Maybe that was a mistake. What's the answer, Ann? – HJeebie-Jeebies

Dear H.J.: What's the question? Should you have told him? YES! To drop a man because of an irritating habit which could be easily stopped was just plain stupid.

If you have any regrets, mail this column to him, with a note asking if he is still chewing ice. It could revive a good friendship.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently I filed for divorce. For the thrid time today I was asked, "What happened?" I really don't care to discuss the details. The people I really care about KNOW what happened. How should I deal with clods who pry? – Entitled To Dignity

Dear E.D.: Abruptly. Simply say, "I don't wish to discuss it." A mature person knows he doesn't have to answer every question put to him.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers's booklet, "Booze and You – for Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped (13 cents now) envelope to Ann LaNDERS, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

To frost cupcakes in a hurry, simply dip the top of each cupcake into soft frosting and twirl ... Keep a large salt shaker filled with flour. It comes in handy when flouring a board for rolling out dough, coating chicken, making gravy, etc.

Here's an easy make-ahead salad for busy cooks. Dissolve a package of lemon-flavored gelatin in hot tomato juice and add a little lemon juice for sparkle. Chill until amost set; fold in drained canned fruit cocktail and chopped celery. Refrigerate until firm.

Try this nutritious and satisfying snack- time treat that will please your entire family. Just combine yogurt and cling peach slices in the blender, whirl until creamy, pour into glasses and serve.

Ann Landers

Children who fear rape can get help

Dear Ann Landers: We want to thank you for printing two letters from adolescent females who wrote in about sexual abuse they were receiving from family members. This type of incident is tragic and on the rise. Alternatives are now available for desperate youngsters who don't know what to do and cannot get support from other family members.

Addressing specifics from "Afraid of the Future," we'd like to point out that (1) a chain-locked door affords little protection from a determined assailant, (2) the child had already taken the steps a 14-year-old could be expected to take, and (3) a 14-year-old is still a child and needs, deserves and is legally entitled to protection by her mother-father and society against all persons who may abuse her-him.

The actions of the uncle in your most recent letter constitute child abuse and criminal assault under most states' laws. The mother's do-nothing response constitutes child neglect. At a minimum, the actions of this mother should have been to demand the house key from her brother and to make it very clear that he would not be welcome unless she was home.

If parents are unwilling to protect their children from a molester-relative, the child should seek outside help from a Rape Crisis center in her area, a school counselor, the clergy or another adult family member who can be trusted. If none of these work, the Child Protection Agency or police should be called. – Jane Leeson, Program Director, Rape Crisis Alliance, Boise, Idaho

Dear Jane Leeson: I view this column as an opportunity to educate people and you gave me a great assist today. Thank you very much.

Dear AnnLanders: I can't be the only person in the world with this pet gripe. Perhaps if you print my letter in the paper people who are guilty of causing the problem might recognize themselves and stop. It would be a national blessing. I refer to individuals who chew on the ice in their drinks.

I actually quit going with a man who wanted to marry me because he did this. (He was rich, too.) Mr. Jawbreaker would order a Scotch on the rocks and for 20 minutes I'd hear "ca-runch – chomp – ca-runch." It drove me bananas. I thought for sure he must be eating the glass. I never said anything. I simply stopped seeing him and he never knew why. Maybe that was a mistake. What's the answer, Ann? – HJeebie-Jeebies

Dear H.J.: What's the question? Should you have told him? YES! To drop a man because of an irritating habit which could be easily stopped was just plain stupid.

If you have any regrets, mail this column to him, with a note asking if he is still chewing ice. It could revive a good friendship.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently I filed for divorce. For the thrid time today I was asked, "What happened?" I really don't care to discuss the details. The people I really care about KNOW what happened. How should I deal with clods who pry? – Entitled To Dignity

Dear E.D.: Abruptly. Simply say, "I don't wish to discuss it." A mature person knows he doesn't have to answer every question put to him.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers's booklet, "Booze and You – for Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped (13 cents now) envelope to Ann LaNDERS, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

All aliens must report in January

KANSAS CITY — The district director of the U.S. Immigration Service has stated that all aliens residing in the United States must report their addresses during the month of January.

The cards may be obtained at any post office or Immigration Service office. Parents or legal guardians of alien children under 14 years of age are required to complete the report for such children.

Any alien who is sick or disabled may have a friend or relative obtain the card for them but it must be personally completed and signed by the alien.

After completing the card, place a 10-cent postage stamp on the reverse side and drop in any mail box. The card may also be completed in any Immigration Service office and handed to the service employe. The deadline for filing reports is Jan. 31.

The post office cannot accept any cards after that date and tardy aliens must send their cards to the nearest Immigration Service office. Only diplomats and aliens accredited to certain international organizations are excused from this requirement.

Any willful failure on the part of an alien to comply with this law may lead to a fine, jail sentence and even deportation from the United States. Last year, 12,886 alients reported their addresses in Kansas and 23,858 in Missouri. Nationally, more than four million aliens are expected to file reports in 1976.

Revision of state judicial wins approval

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Revision of the state's judicial system won approval by a Senate committee Tuesday and now awaits floor debate by the entire body.

The measure, approved 7-1, was passed by the entire Senate last year but failed to come up for debate in the House before the final minutes of the session ended.

The Missouri Bar, prompted by last year's defeat, circulated petitions in a drive to put judicial reform directly before the people in next November's elections.

"I hate to be stampeded into this thing," said Sen. Jack Gant, D-Independence, referring to the fear if the lawmakers don't act, the Bar proposal would be approved by the voters.

"I hate to legislate out of fear," He said.

Certain special courts in St. Louis would be eliminated under the bill, along with judges currently acting as magistrates and probate judges would become associate circuit judges; the nonpartisan court plan could be implemented easier and provide for the establishment of a small claims court.

The committee voted against another court measure, which would put magistrate judges in St. Louis city and county, and Jackson, Clay and Platte counties under the nonpartisan court plan.

Dr. Lamb

Drug can lower cholesterol

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing in regard to taking Atromid-S for high cholesterol as many are doing. Is it harmful if taken over too long a period of time?

I have taken it for four years as prescribed by my doctor three times a day and it has helped. I watch my diet too. Could it be more beneficial if taken before meals instead of with the meals?

I have never had any reaction from taking it and have my cholesterol checked once a year or so.

DEAR READER — Atromid-S is a popular medicine and it is helpful in most cases in lowering the cholesterol levels. However, it is not recommended for this use unless dietary management is also used to eliminate obesity and to help lower the blood cholesterol levels.

Despite its usefulness in lowering cholesterol, the more significant question of whether doing this with medicine prevents heart attacks or not, has not yet been answered. We hope it does.

There have been some enthusiastic reports of decreased rates of heart attacks in young men taking Atromid-S and the improvement was not related to lowering the cholesterol level.

There may be a good explanation for this. Atromid-S also decreases the tendency of the blood to clot. This anticlotting action may be useful in preventing heart attacks. That in fact is the basis for the recent enthusiasm over the possible use of ordinary aspirin to prevent heart attacks.

No one knows exactly how Atromid-S works. Its action is apparently on liver function. The liver is the major metabolic organ involved in the body's formation of cholesterol and the formation of certain blood fats involved in fatty-cholesterol deposits.

Many people seem to tolerate Atromid-S for years without any harm at all. Like most medicines there is a list as long as your arm of things it can do. Almost all medicines that help the body can also harm it.

The one big precaution to users is that it decreases the tendency of the blood to clot, so if you take anticlotting medicines and Atromid-S you may need to have the amount of anticlotting medicine (blood thinners) reduced about half. Also since aspirin tends to decrease the normal clotting mechanism too, I think people taking Atromid-S should be wary of taking any significant amounts of aspirin on their own.

Occasionally the medicine affects liver function and has to be discontinued. By following the patient properly the doctor can tell this.

Some patients develop nausea and loose stools, excess gas formation and abdominal distress. Rarely headache, fatigue and even muscle cramps occur.

I suspect your doctor wants you to take the medicine with your meals to help minimize the possibility of irritating your stomach or causing nausea. You might be wise to follow his advice.

Considering the large number of people using this medicine and the rare and usually not important complications that have occurred, this is a fairly safe and good medicine.

Dinner hours found to be hazardous

A survey conducted by the National Bureau of Standards and the Consumer Product Safety Commission notes that, of 33,000 households surveyed, 2,463 reported fires in the last year.

Results of the survey showed that 65 per cent of these fires started in the kitchen, with the peak time between 5 and 6 p.m.; over 60 per cent of all fires involved appliances, and more than half of these involved ignition of grease and other foods.

Repeal of campaign finance requirements passes committee

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A move to repeal several Campaign Finance Act reporting requirements successfully passed a Senate committee Monday evening, while a House committee approved a bill to increase the number of public defenders.

The campaign finance bill lessens requirements in the Campaign Finance Act which was passed by public initiative in 1974. Changes include reducing the instances when candidates would have to list sources of income and exempts those who spend or receive $500 or under in a campaign. The measure also allows the Missouri Elections Commission to exempt all the reporting requirements in cases of alleged "hardship".

Several similar bills have been introduced in the House but have not yet been discussed. On the same issue, Missourians for Honest Elections, who sponsored the petition drive, filed suit in St. Louis Tuesday to exempt candidates who spend $500 or under from reporting personal income sources. St. Louis Circuit Court Judge Robert Lee Campbell issued a temporary restraining order freeing those candidates from the income disclosure statements. A hearing will be held Friday to determine whether an injunction should be issued.

The Senate bill sponsor, Sen. A.M. Spradling Jr., said the act has forced him to leave office. "The way the law is written just about everyone of us could be sent to jail," the Cape Girardeau Democrat told the Senate Apportionment, Elections, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee.

"I'm sure every nickel and dime expense is not itemized and even that could send you to jail," Spradling said.

The House Judiciary Committee approved a measure which provides for increases in the state's public defender program, a measure supported by Gov. Christopher S. Bond. The bill, which goes to the House Floor, increases the number of public defenders and assistants which can be hired by the circuit court regions to help fulfill the job of defending juveniles and misdemenants.

In other committee action, the Senate Education Committee sent a bill exempting retired teachers's pensions from state income taxes to the Senate floor.

Discussion on a House proposal raising disability insurance payments for persons receiving workman's compensation was heard also, but no vote was taken.

The Urban Affairs Committee approved and passed out for floor debate a bill raising the maximum daily expenses for state prisoners who are kept in county or city jails. The bill calls for a $5 increase over the present $3 allotment.

The case of the paneful glass image

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Shaky was the proprietor of a glass business that got few breaks. Then, one day, while doodling with his telephone dial, he suddenly discovered that the digits of his telephone number spelled out "MR. GLASS."

Overwhelmed by the discovery and its promotional value, Shaky immediately started a big advertising campaign to create for himself a sure-fire image. To reach him, prompted his new promotional material — "JUST DIAL MR. GLASS."

While money was no obstacle to Shaky's advertising campaign, the telephone company, unfortunately, was. Right in the middle of the campaign, the ding-a-ling company notified Shaky that his telephone number was being changed.

"You can't do that," protested Shaky. "I've just poured a fortune into promoting that number. If you change it, you'll shatter my whole glass business."

"We're sorry," was the answer, "but we feel that the change is necessary. And, the successful operation of our business must be considered before yours. Consequently, there is nothing we can do for you."

Panicked, Shaky made a beeline for the nearest courthouse where he demanded that the telephone company be ordered not to change his number.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you prevent the telephone company from destroying Shaky's paneful image by taking away his telephone number?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a subscriber has no proprietary right in a number assigned to him by a telephone company. If in the conduct of its business, noted the judge, a telephone company finds it necessary to change a number, it may do so.

Bond announces grant of Mississippi port study

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has announced approval by the Ozarks Regional Commission (ORC) for a $36,250 grant to study the feasibility for a port on the Mississippi River at Caruthersville.

On behalf of the Pemiscot County Port Authority, Bond had recommended that ORC fund the project. The study is designed to evaluate the impact of a port at Caruthersville, provide a design, calculate construction costs and provide alternative methods of financing.

The grant fits into the governor's Jobs for Missourians program by providing a study on a port that could bring economic opportunity to the state's Bootheel region. The port would provide a transportation point for exporting of local agricultural products, attract new industry to the area and provide an input point for overseas products for return investment opportunities.

Eastman Kodak's annual 4-H Photo contest drew 250 photos entered by more than 144 4-H members ages 9 to 19 and from across the United States.

Among the more striking entries was that of Margaret H. Holmes, 17, of Dallas, Ore. whose cat "Josie" (at left) charmed her way into the judges' hearts. A statuesque pachyderm (rignt) captured the fancy of 15-year-old Timothy Swarr of Manheim, pa.

NOT EXACTLY GRACIOUS in his sprawling posture, a bear catches 40 winks, and the attention of Beth Ann Adams, 14, of Mount Olive, Ill., as an entry in Eastman Kodak's 4-H Photo contest. At right, the instincts of 16-year-old Nancy Hebb's kitten provided a novel entry. The Dearborn, Mich. student noticed the cat's antics on the windowsill each morning where a birdfeeder had been placed just outside, and captured it all on film.

Yoshikazu Shirakawa, one of Japan's foremost photographers, has made a monumental contribution toward America's Bicentennial celebration. He has unveiled, in heroic portraits, the vastness and grandeur of America's basic backbone — its highest mountains, deepest canyons and majestic national parks — in photographs which reveal their dramatic, pristine beauty and unspoiled wildness.

The unveiling signaled the recent joint celebration of his newest book, "Eternal America," and his first one-man exhibition in the United States. He arrived for the dual ceremony at the International Center of Photography where mural-size blowups from his book were on display. After ICP, other appearances were scheduled for Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco before Shirakawa returned to Japan.

An incident during the hanging of the exhibit at ICP reveals the intense personal involvement which Shirakawa feels with every detail of his photographs. One of the enlargements revealed some tiny tracks in the otherwise flawless ripples of Death Valley dunes, and he wondered out loud if they were disturbing.

Standing nearby, Cornell Capa heard him and the dynamic director of New York's newest photographic museum volunteered to have the spots removed. Shirakawa's response was instinctive.

"No one touches one of my prints except me!" he exclaimed. He pondered a moment, then added, "I waited for the winds to obliterate the tracks but perhaps I should have waited longer. But they were there and they'll remain in the print."

"Eternal America" is a project in the grand scale from conception to completion. It makes a huge 11x15-inch volume of 242 pages with 80 pages of startling eight-color-process reproductions and 80 pages of graphic black-and-white duotone illustrations. The lavish production, published by Kodansha International Ltd. of Tokyo, New York and San Francisco, is reflected in the price of $60.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas's foreword is an urgent plea for Americans to be vigilant about preserving our ecological ethics if America is to remain eternal. And Sigurd F. Olson, past president of the National Parks Assn. traces the history, purpose and future of our national parks, making clear their inestimable value to the American people.

Shirakawa's photographic odyssey in the U. S. took 15 months, covered more than 30,000 miles in land vehicles, logged nearly 600 hours in airplanes and totaled about 13,000 exposures. The areas he chose were often inaccessible as well as primitively beautiful and dangerous as well as hardships were involved in achieving the images he pursued.

His passion for primitive places began with his first mountain photos in Japan in 1960. They attracted his countrymen's attention. It became a deep, personal commitment which solidified over the years with 15 trips to photograph Europe's noted mountain chain. It resulted in publication of "The Alps" in 1969 and brought international attention. His next challenge took four years and with the publication of "Himalayas," Shirakawa's fame spread worldwide.

"Eternal America" is the third volume which sets the pattern of his lifework's theme, "recovery of humanity through rediscovery of the earth" . . . through photography.

What sets his photographs apart are their monumental scope, their dynamic simplicity of design and the revelation of what our basic land looks like in the magical colors of a sunrise, a sunset or the mysterious moods of storms. The black-and-white views are graphically different from normal mountain scenics in that they were all taken with infrared film which pierces normal haze and reveals distant details with remarkable clarity.

Most of the photographs are reproduced in impressive double-page spreads measuring 14 x 20 inches and several are multipage foldouts to add to the unusualness of the book.

Shirakawa's photographic notes reveal that most of the pictures were taken with an Asahi Pentax 6x7 cm camera with a battery of lenses ranging from fisheye to an 800mm telephoto. In some instances, he coupled an eight-power converter to a 600mm telephoto lens for an effective 4,800mm focal length.

His cameras had to be protected with plastic against desert sandstorms and they froze on occasions in the intense cold of Mt. Whitney and the Arctic Circle in Alaska. Having surmounted the difficulties, Shirakawa's future is focused on capturing the Andes and Patagonia, the Japanese Alps, Norway's fjords and 100 famous mountains of the world.

"If through my photography, people were to rediscover this earth of ours," he says, "my joy would know no bounds."

That's photographic dedication.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Since everyone wants to be a tax expert, we have found through all the rework of others we are called on to do, it would be better for all concerned to do it right the first time. We are now offering franchises to our computerized tax & bookkeeping service to every citizen who has a clean record, except government employees, (see crimes IRS Code Section 7214) for 1976 for $1,000 renewable yearly.

You don't have to know anything about taxes or bookkeeping . In fact, we find it easier to teach than to unteach.

You will be individually trained by our people as long as is necessary. Then you set up business on your own. It should take less than a week to get you started on your own.

You will inerview your clients on our preprinted interview sheets, send them to us. We will check and correct all errors, after calling you or the client for any additional information you failed to get, then send through the computer. Then we will recheck, place in an attractive folder, address the envelopes and put the returns in them ready for your client to check, sign & mail, before returning them to you.

If interested please come to our drive-in office at 1625 Independence, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Our mobile office will cover all areas until we find a franchise or employee, if business justified an office. We offer all types of Federal returns plus all states & Puerto Rico.

Anyone who wants our service please call(314) 335-3468 for appointment in your area.

RESPA A FAILURE

The Federal Government has discovered that too much government control of private business can backfire. Such is the case of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, better known as RESPA. It was enacted to help the home buyer pay less closing costs, get more information sooner and ease the closing procedures. A noble gesture but it has just the opposite effect.

It has delayed closings, decreased the home buyer's ability to compare terms of several mortgages, driven lending institutions out of the mortgage market, and has burdened home buyers and sellers with inconvenience, invasion of privacy and increased costs.

This was one case where the legislation was disliked by all the concerned parties: attorneys, banks, brokers, buyers, and sellers. Hats off to the originators of the bill who realized it didn't work and have now sent it back to the drawing board to start over from scratch.

Cut the red tape when you buy or sell your home. Call Bob Nowell Real Estate and Construction, 471-2774, more than 20 years experience. LET US WORK FOR YOU.

RESPA A FAILURE

The Federal Government has discovered that too much government control of private business can backfire. Such is the case of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, better known as RESPA. It was enacted to help the home buyer pay less closing costs, get more information sooner and ease the closing procedures. A noble gesture but it has just the opposite effect.

It has delayed closings, decreased the home buyer's ability to compare terms of several mortgages, driven lending institutions out of the mortgage market, and has burdened home buyers and sellers with inconvenience, invasion of privacy and increased costs.

This was one case where the legislation was disliked by all the concerned parties: attorneys, banks, brokers, buyers, and sellers. Hats off to the originators of the bill who realized it didn't work and have now sent it back to the drawing board to start over from scratch.

Cut the red tape when you buy or sell your home. Call Bob Nowell Real Estate and Construction 471-2774 more than 20 years experience LET US WORK FOR YOU.

residents of the area and has prevented the normal interchange of goods and services.

Motorists are required to detour more than 20 miles to cross the river.

State Rep. J. T. "Jerry" Howard, D-Dexter, has introduced a resolution in the Missouri House of Representatives requesting Chief Engineer Robert Hunter of the highway department to coordinate efforts with the commanding general of Ft. Leonard Wood and the adjutant general of the National Guard in building a temporary bridge. Howard also cited economic hardship as his reason for supporting the temporary bridge.

"In view of the enormous amount of traffic using U.S. Highway 60, I feel that a temporary bridge and the assistance requested is justified," he said.

The District 10 office of the highway department may not agree.

District 10 Engineer Lionel Murray has been quoted as saying the project would be expensive and time consuming. Murray is out of town for the week and unavailable for comment.

If the temporary bridge were built on the site of the old bridge, then work on the new structure could not be completed, Murray said.

If the temporary bridge were moved to the north of south of the demolished structure, the department would have to acquire right of way and build approaches, he is reported as saying.

Work is proceeding rapidly on the new bridge, Murray said, and completion is expected before April.

The new bridge will be wider and have other safety features lacking in the old bridge.

Oran awards banquet sets

ORAN — The Chamber of Commerce Monday night set Feb. 21 for its annual achievement awards banquet, when a man and woman of the community will be honored for outstanding community achievements during the past year and an additional person will be recognized for past achievements in the community.

The guest speaker for the banquet will be Thomas R. Gilmore of Sikeston, a former Scott County prosecuting attorney and present city judge.

Also discussed was the fourth annual Oran Fall Festival which will be held in August.

The Fall Festival was started by the Chamber of Commerce and has been well received by the community.

A definite date for the festival has not been set.

The next Chamber of Commerce meeting was set for Feb. 17, because the regular meeting date falls on the Washington's Birthday holiday.

Car is reported stolen; found burned soon after

DEXTER — A car owned by Jim Mayberry of Zalma was reported stolen at almost the same time it was reported found Tuesday night, police said today.

Mayberry reported the car missing from the Wal-M. parking lot about 8:30 p.m.

Police said the car was found abandoned and burned at a location northwest of Dudley and reported at almost the same time.

CB radios, tires reported stolen

Two citizens band radios and a truck tire were reported stolen in separate thefts, police said today.

Randy Porter of Lilbourn told police that a citizens band radio was taken from his pickup truck between 11 p.m. Monday and noon Tuesday while it was parked in the Missouri Delta Community Hospital parking lot. The radio was valued at $189.

Mark Cheatham, 318 Cravens St., told police a CB radio was taken from his car between 12:15 and 3:35 p.m. Tuesday while it was parked on the Sikeston High School parking lot. The radio was valued at $140.

Gene Dorris, 118 William St., told police a truck tire worth $50 was taken from the back of his pickup truck sometime between Jan. 13 and Tuesday. He said he did not know where the theft occurred.

3 thefts investigated by Charleston police

CHARLESTON — Police are investigating the theft of beer and money and a radio in separate incidents reported Tuesday afternoon.

Police Chief Bob Ritchey said six cases of beer and $20 in quarters were stolen from Roamer Grocery on West Marshall Street sometime after closing at 10:30 p.m. Monday.

The theft was reported at 1:56 p.m. Tuesday by owner Jay Butler.

There were no signs of forced entry, and other money in the cash register was not taken.

An AM radio valued at $87 was stolen off a tractor at Simmons Equipment Co. on West Marshall Street sometime between Jan. 11 and 16.

Tiny tug frees freighter

A commercial tug appears as a mere speck next to the icebound Canadian freighter Frontenac Sunday as the tug moves in to help break up the frozen Detroit River off fighting Island. The Frontenac moved into Detroit and tied up when it was advised that the upper St. Clair River, its destination, was also clogged with ice jams.

prisoner. He then admitted his identity and was placed under arrest.

Cluck has a criminal record in both Stoddard and Butler counties. Police said his mother and wife live in Dexter, so it was suspected he may have been heading this direction.

In conducting the search for Cluck, the FBI contacted his friends and relatives in Southeast Missouri as well as looking for him in the St. Louis area.

Cluck was arrested last September on Highway 53 at the outskirts of Poplar Bluff with another man, Jimmie Caudel. The car they occupied contained property reportedly stolen in Stoddard County.

Cluck was charged with possession of stolen property and burglary in Stoddard County, but the charges were later dropped when a witness in the case left the area.

The increase, amounting to an additional three-tenths of one per cent of a worker's gross income, would take effect on Jan. 1, 1977. Some increase would occur anyway in 1977, but Ford said the eitional hike is needed to ensure adequate funds for Social Security benefits.

Americans also would feel the Ford budget through reduced outlays for food stamps, school lunches and increased charges for Medicare. While some Medicare benefits for the elderly would increase for major illnesses, the total savings to the government in 1977 would be $2.2 billion.

Full-time federal employment would be reduced 11,500, including 6,700 civilian defense workers. Antother 19,000 part-time and temporary defense jobs would be cut.

"This budget does not shrink from hard choices where necessary," Ford said. "If we don't get a handle now on the growth in federal spending, we're going to be in serious difficulties in years ahead."

Federal expenditures in 1977 would be about 5.5 per cent greater than the 1976 estimated outlays of $373.5 billion, which Ford said is less than half the average spending growth of the previous decade. The 1976 deficit is estimated at a record $76 billion.

"The budget I am proposing for fiscal year 1977 and the direction I seek for the future meet the test of responsible fiscal policy ... We must not continue drifting in the direction of bigger and bigger government," Ford said in a message accompanying te budget.

Government appeals banker's acquital

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The federal government has appealed an acquittal in the perjury indictment of a St. Louis banker, maintaining that if allowed to testify he might clear up a campaign fund under question involving former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

The government is appealing the acquittal by Judge John W. Oliver of the U.S. District Court here of Donald E. Lasater, board chairman of the Mercantile Trust Co., of St. Louis.

In its appeal brief filed Tuesday, the government says he might have resolved the question whether funds in a campaign committee's accounts were Hearnes campaign funds or bribes. The decision has been appealed to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

The indictment returned Feb. 27 accused Lasater of lying to a grand jury in response to questions about a bond transaction between Mercantile Trust and the late J. V. Conran, once a powerful political figure in southeastern Missouri. Judge Oliver held that the questions were not material to the grand jury probe.

The government contended the St. Louis bank loaned Conran money to buy the bonds, then purchased the bonds back from Conran at a price above the market value. About $63,000 in profits went into the account of the Bootheel Committee for Hearnes, the government charged.

At the time Lasater was indicted, the grand jury was investigating possible income tax liabilities of the former governor.

In the appeal brief filed Tuesday, Asst. U.S. Atty. Anthony P. Nugent Jr., cited testimony from R.L. Saalwaechter, who succeeded Conran as president of the Farmers Bank of Portageville, about the committee's account.

"Conran directed Saalwaechter to handle the account as Governor Hearnes directed, that the money was to be used by Hearnes and his family after he left office," the appeal brief said.

DAEOC elections slated for February

PORTAGEVILLE — Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation has announced that elections to select members of the board of directors to represent the poor will be held in February at each of the 12 Area Opportunity Centers operated by DAEOC in the six-county Bootheel area. The elections will be held from 6 to 8:30 p.m.

Two board members from each of the three southern counties will be selected on Feb. 16. Each of the two centers in Pemiscot, Dunklin and New Madrid counties will elect one board member.

The three northern counties of Scott, Stoddard and Mississippi will have one elected board member per county. In these three counties, the two centers in each county will elect their area representative on Feb. 9. Another election, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Feb. 16, will be held to select one representative from the two persons who received the most votes in the election held on Feb. 9. The final result will be one elected board member from each of the three counties.

Persons nominated for election must be from the low-income group, or their elected representative, since he or she will be the DAEOC board representative of the poor in the six-county area and must voice the problems of the poor to DAEOC in order to obtain programs to solve these problems through community action.

Chaffee council selects men to study voting boundaries

CHAFFEE — A committee composed of Councilmen Jerry Riley, O. E. Rigdon, George Allwood and Bill Whistler was selected by the City Council Monday night to study reorganization of the voting ward boundaries.

City Attorney Joe Perry Rice III reported on a six by eight-foot easement on the Wehmeyer Clinic lot he was preparing to provide space for the city's siren systems.

Councilman Allwood explained this amount of footage was too small as more space would be required just for the generator. It was decided space would be needed for at least a 10 by 10-foot building.

Rice said this would be the size listed in the easement.

A decision on bids for installing the sirens was tabled until the next meeting since only one bid had been received.

The hiring of Lester C. Lack as a police patrolman under a federal grant was approved by the council.

A committee previously appointed, at the suggestion of Mayor Robert Capshaw, to study the charges for services submitted by the city attorney reported the charges were in compliance with the city ordinance pertaining to the city attorney. The report said that charges for extra services the attorney had been assigned were in line with that of the city attorneys.

The report was accepted and approved by the council.

A bid of $2,975 for the city's insurance for a period of one year was received from Rice Insurance Agency. Since no other bids were received, a motion was made and approved to accept the bid.

The reappointment of five men and the appointment of two new men as auxiliary police officers were approved. Reappointed were Earl Blattel, Raymond Rowell, Ronald Moyers, Charlie Pruitt and Lindell Gibbons, and the new officers are Larry Korn and David Rhodes.

residents of the area and has prevented the normal interchange of goods and services.

Motorists are required to detour more than 20 miles to cross the river.

State Rep. J. T. "Jerry" Howard, D-Dexter, has introduced a resolution in the Missouri House of Representatives requesting Chief Engineer Robert Hunter of the highway department to coordinate efforts with the commanding general of Ft. Leonard Wood and the adjutant general of the National Guard in building a temporary bridge. Howard also cited economic hardship as his reason for supporting the temporary bridge.

"In view of the enormous amount of traffic using U.S. Highway 60, I feel that a temporary bridge and the assistance requested is justified," he said.

The District 10 office of the highway department may not agree.

District 10 Engineer Lionel Murray has been quoted as saying the project would be expensive and time consuming. Murray is out of town for the week and unavailable for comment.

If the temporary bridge were built on the site of the old bridge, then work on the new structure could not be completed, Murray said.

If the temporary bridge were moved to the north of south of the demolished structure, the department would have to acquire right of way and build approaches, he is reported as saying.

Work is proceeding rapidly on the new bridge, Murray said, and completion is expected before April.

The new bridge will be wider and have other safety features lacking in the old bridge.

Bulldog subs save 71-69 victory

By DALE FORBIS

MOUND CITY, ILLINOIS – Whew!

Like a page right out of "Frank Merriwell," the Sikeston Bulldogs won one for an injured buddy, 71-69, over the Meridian Bobcats.

"We won that one for Eddy," was the obvious explanation of the team's dedication of the game to Ed Nunnelee, who is out for the season. Team members talked to the bed-ridden senior on the phone before the game for a few tearful minutes, then went out and held off the hot- shooting Bobcats for the 11th SHS win in 13 starts.

Sikeston was forced into a stall game during the last half of the fourth quarter. Foul trouble claimed all three big men in the SHS lineup and, when Marc Eaves fouled out with two minutes left, the normally- huge Sikeston team was playing with just one man six feet tall. But, the smaller players proved to be efficient ballhandlers and miraculously protected the lead against the larger Bobcats.

Curtis Sales opened the game in Nunnelee's guard spot and played well, finishing with eight rebounds and five points. The bobcats, with All-State candidate Tony Bogan leading the way, slowly edged to a lead of three at the first quarter's end, 21-18. Bogan scored eight of his 15 points during that time. The home team was hitting nearly every shot and Sikeston was only slightly less effective from the field. With Bogan and Anthony Humble working together to score the Bobcat points, Meridian continued to add the lead. Sikeston's offense was stagnant, just as it had been in the previous loss to Charleston, and the bobcats had leads of nine on three occasions. finally, trailing 39-30, Sikeston ripped off eleven points in a row and grabbed a 41-39 lead. Two Meridian free throws tied the score at 41-41.

"We tried to be nice guys and play it fair on the score," said coach Bud Spears after the game. Sikeston's scorebook showed 41 at halftime; the official book had 40 for Meridian and, on Sikeston's insistence, the home team total was changed. Then, the Sikeston team felt it got something less than an equal break on foul calls late in the game, especially when marc eaves was forced to leave. Unfortunately for the Illinois folks the visitors had the last laugh. The undersized quintet of Harold Dockins, Kenny Standridge, Curtis Sales, Jeff Limbaugh and Larry Jackson held onto the ball on offense and kept Meridian from scoring while they were on defense, as the clock ticked its way slowly to the game's end.

Setting the stage for the thrilling fourth period was a second half that saw Sikeston in the lead most of the way. The margin never exceeded eight, but the Bulldog side of the scoreboard always had the bigger numbers. Marc Eaves was enjoying his best night of the year, scoring 13 of his game high 27 points during the third period. After that quarter Sikeston led 58-52.

The lead remained in Bulldog hands throughout the fourth frame. Meridian closed within one on two occasions, but never tied the score. Alonzo Harris was the first to leave, taking his 15- point output to the bench midway through the quarter. Another 15- point scorer, Paul Gilbow, left a few moments later. Then, Eaves leaped high for a pass while Sikeston was stalling and had the misfortune to land on Anthony Humble, earning a confused trip to the bench for Sikeston's last remaining big man. This time Sikeston's scorebook showed just four fouls for Eaves, as did the scoreboard listing of the players and their foul totals. Too bad for Sikeston, it proved to be the official book that counted. But, the little guys came through ...

They protected the ball when they had it and fought like tigers when they didn't. Harold Dockins, the only remaining starter, did most of the ballhandling and was the man of the hour when he canned two free throws to insure the win. With only ten seconds left Sikeston led 71-67. Meridian rushed downcourt and scored the game's last bucket, but it was too little, too late.

Sikeston had the win, 71-69. Ed Nunnelee's win.

Meridian wins jayvee game

MOUND CITY, Illinois — Superior size and speed payed off for the Bobcat jayvees in the form of a 70-51 win, as Meridian claimed their B-game with Sikeston. It was the second loss in a row for the Sikeston junior varsity and dropped their record to 3-3.

"It was by far our worst game of the year," said coach Asa Kinnaman.

Sikeston was outscored in every quarter and failed, in the second half, to get the ball to high- scoring Tim Ward. Ward accounted for half of Sikeston points in the first half, but finished with 16, taking only three second half shots.

Sophomore David Williams led Meridian with 19. Dickison scored 17, Wells 14 and Thompson ten.

Bulldog subs save 71-69 victory

By DALE FORBIS

MOUND CITY, ILLINOIS -- Whew!

Like a page right out of "Frank Merriwell," the Sikeston Bulldogs won one for an injured buddy, 71-69, over the Meridian Bobcats.

"We won that one for Eddy," was the obvious explanation of the team's dedication of the game to Ed Nunnelee, who is out for the season. Team members talked to the bed-ridden senior on the phone before the game for a few tearful minutes, then went out and held off the hot- shooting Bobcats for the 11th SHS win in 13 starts.

Sikeston was forced into a stall game during the last half of the fourth quarter. Foul trouble claimed all three big men in the SHS lineup and, when Marc Eaves fouled out with two minutes left, the normally- huge Sikeston team was playing with just one man six feet tall. But, the smaller players proved to be efficient ballhandlers and miraculously protected the lead against the larger Bobcats.

Curtis Sales opened the game in Nunnelee's guard spot and played well, finishing with eight rebounds and five points. The bobcats, with All-State candidate Tony Bogan leading the way, slowly edged to a lead of three at the first quarter's end, 21-18. Bogan scored eight of his 15 points during that time. The home team was hitting nearly every shot and Sikeston was only slightly less effective from the field. With Bogan and Anthony Humble working together to score the Bobcat points, Meridian continued to add the lead. Sikeston's offense was stagnant, just as it had been in the previous loss to Charleston, and the bobcats had leads of nine on three occasions. finally, trailing 39-30, Sikeston ripped off eleven points in a row and grabbed a 41-39 lead. Two Meridian free throws tied the score at 41-41.

"We tried to be nice guys and play it fair on the score," said coach Bud Spears after the game. Sikeston's scorebook showed 41 at halftime; the official book had 40 for Meridian and, on Sikeston's insistence, the home team total was changed. Then, the Sikeston team felt it got something less than an equal break on foul calls late in the game, especially when marc eaves was forced to leave. Unfortunately for the Illinois folks the visitors had the last laugh. The undersized quintet of Harold Dockins, Kenny Standridge, Curtis Sales, Jeff Limbaugh and Larry Jackson held onto the ball on offense and kept Meridian from scoring while they were on defense, as the clock ticked its way slowly to the game's end.

Setting the stage for the thrilling fourth period was a second half that saw Sikeston in the lead most of the way. The margin never exceeded eight, but the Bulldog side of the scoreboard always had the bigger numbers. Marc Eaves was enjoying his best night of the year, scoring 13 of his game high 27 points during the third period. After that quarter Sikeston led 58-52.

The lead remained in Bulldog hands throughout the fourth frame. Meridian closed within one on two occasions, but never tied the score. Alonzo Harris was the first to leave, taking his 15- point output to the bench midway through the quarter. Another 15- point scorer, Paul Gilbow, left a few moments later. Then, Eaves leaped high for a pass while Sikeston was stalling and had the misfortune to land on Anthony Humble, earning a confused trip to the bench for Sikeston's last remaining big man. This time Sikeston's scorebook showed just four fouls for Eaves, as did the scoreboard listing of the players and their foul totals. Too bad for Sikeston, it proved to be the official book that counted. But, the little guys came through ...

They protected the ball when they had it and fought like tigers when they didn't. Harold Dockins, the only remaining starter, did most of the ballhandling and was the man of the hour when he canned two free throws to insure the win. With only ten seconds left Sikeston led 71-67. Meridian rushed downcourt and scored the game's last bucket, but it was too little, too late.

Sikeston had the win, 71-69. Ed Nunnelee's win.

Meridian wins jayvee game

MOUND CITY, Illinois — Superior size and speed payed off for the Bobcat jayvees in the form of a 70-51 win, as Meridian claimed their B-game with Sikeston. It was the second loss in a row for the Sikeston junior varsity and dropped their record to 3-3.

"It was by far our worst game of the year," said coach Asa Kinnaman.

CHAFFEE---Illmo-Scott City bombed Oran 87-79 in a varsity game. Kelly whipped East Prairie 74-64 in another varsity game and the Kelly JV team beat Delta 57-45 as the first round of the Scott-Mississippi tournament came to a close here Tuesday night.

The I-SC Rams and Oran Eagles found the lanes leading to the basket quite empty but the Rams were able to get the ball in the hoop more often than Oran as indicated by the final score.

Oran was able to shoot in more shots from the field 32-31 than the Rams but I-SC hit 25 shots from the free throw line to only 15 for the Eagles.

The Rams took a slim 22-20 first period lead and opened the game open in the second period and took a 45-38 halftime lead.

The second half was a free scoring affair with I-SC taking the edge 42-41. Ray Campbell scored 24 points for the Rams. Robert Taylor scored 22 for Oran and Senciboy hit 20.

The Kelly Hawks varsity team whipped the EPHS Eagles for the second time in two weeks. The Eagles were not able to stay up with the fast moving Hawks. Randy Hagar dropped in 25 points for Kelly and Grady Williford hit 23 for East Prairie.

Kelly's JV team outscored the Delta Bobcats 14-7 in the first period and had to hang on the last three quarters to win. Don Riley scored 17 to lead the Hawks and Reigert hit 13 for Delta.

Wednesday night semi-finals will find first seeded Scott Central playing fourth seeded Delta at 8:30 in the varsity game and first seeded Illmo-Scott City tangles with fourth seeded Chaffee at 7:00.

Jays hold off Lilbourn

LILBOURN---"After their loss to Scott Central they'll be ready for us and revenge will be a factor". These were the words of a worried coach Mitch Haskins before Charleston tangled with the Lilbourn Panthers here Tuesday night and he couldn't have made a more accurate statement as the Panthers, who by the way, were number one in the state rankings in class 2A, battled the Bluejays down to the final seconds before fading to The Daily Standard's number one quintet 57-56.

The Charleston Bluejays are ranked number four in the state in class 3A according to the poll which reached The Daily Standard before the game.

The Bluejays held the Panthers under their points per game against average as Charleston had allowed only 58.9 points a game against them before the start. Lilbourn's tough man to man defense held the Bluejays under their 67.1 per game average.

Frankie Robinson missed his first two shots and Michael Smith connected on his first two to give the Bluejays a 4-0 lead to set the tempo of the game. The Bluejays had trouble finding the basket after that and Lilbourn began to warm up and took a 17-14 lead at the end of the first period.

The game was marked by scoring spurts followed by droughts by both teams. The second period followed the same pattern as Lilbourn took their turn to lose their sights on the baskets and Charleston found their shooting eye and forged to a five point lead at the intermission 33-28.

The Bluejays came out in the third period and looked as if they were going to blow the game wide open as coach Haskins' team took charge of the game and ran up a nine point lead. Midway through the quarter Lilbourn had come back to within three but was never able to get any closer until 2:33 was left in the fourth period when the Panthers tied the score at 53-53.

Charleston kept their poise that they have displayed in winning their 13th game of the season against three losses and their 10th in a row. They had a one point lead with seven seconds left in the game with the ball belonging to the Panthers, but Lilbourn couldn't stuff the ball in to win the game. Ricky Frazier led the scoring with 19 and Frankie Robinson popped in 19 for Lilbourn.

Lions bomb Kennett

KENNETT----The Senath-Hornersville caught the Kennett Indians in a mood other than wanting to play basketball or else the Lions had a super defense. Whichever was the case, the Lions humbled the Indians 63-38 here Tuesday night.

Kennett was in the game only in the first few minutes of the first quarter as the Lions held a 15-11 lead at the end of the initial period.

Kennett rolled and played dead for the Lions the rest of the way and Senath outscored Kennett in the final quarter 14-3.

Robert Roundtree scored 14 points to lead the Kennett offense. Robert Duckworth dropped in 17 for Senath.

Senath hit 27 shots from the field to only 14 for Kennett.

People in the news

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Actor Robert Redford, known for leading roles in such movies as "The Sting" and "Three Days of the Condor," has been named chairman of the Provo Canyon sewer district committee.

Redford, owner of Sundance ski resort in Provo Canyon, succeeds Ken Patten, who had been chairman since 1971.

The committee is seeking a grant to install a sewer system from Wasatch County east of Provo down through Provo Canyon.

A committee spokesman said Redford's term runs through December.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Comedian Dick Gregory, an activist during Mississippi's civil rights struggle of the 1960s, has been named a member of Gov. Cliff Finch's honorary staff of colonels.

The colonel designation, a traditional title awarded to supporters of Mississippi govrnors, also was extended to Fayette Mayor Charles Evers and Aaron Henry, head of Mississippi's Loyalist Democrats and the state president of the NAACP.

Gregory, who had made Mississippi and its politics the subject of many of his barbs in past years, was at the State Capitol Building during Finch's inauguration Tuesday.

The comedian entertained Monday night at one of several banquets honoring Finch and received his colonel's medallion at one of them.

LONDON (AP) — Rita Hayworth, the movie goddess of the 1940s, needed help getting off a TWA jetliner when it landed here on a flight from Los Angeles.

"Miss Hayworth started shouting and waving her arms about. She didn't want to leave the plane," said a TWA spokesman of the Monday evening incident.

Rezoning request forwarded

The Sikeston Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday decided to forward a rezoning request to the Board of Adjustments instead of taking action on the issue itself.

The decision concerned a lot bounded by Sixth, Seventh and Athens streets which owner W. A. Garner wants rezoned from single-family to commercial.

Garner said he has an old house on the property that he wants to tear down and replace with a new home. In order to prevent hardship for his tenant, Garner said he wants to move a mobile home onto the property until the new home is built.

He said the only way he knew of doing that would be to rezone the property.

However, the commission, decided to refer the matter of granting a temporary variance from the city ordinance to the Board of Adjustments.

Commission chairman Robert Stearnes told the commissioners that the city will have to consider raising its fee for those who wish to file for a zoning change. The fee is currently $25.

He said the current fee no longer covers the cost of mailing notices to affected property owners.

City Manager Charles Church told the commission he is seeking to determine a new rate now and will present it to the commission at its next meeting.

Kiwanians hear about water safety

James McDaniel, a patrolman for the state Division of Water Safety, discussed boating activities and safety at Tuesday night's Kiwanis Club meeting in the El Capri Restaurant.

McDaniel, who works in the Lake Wappapello area, showed slides of Missouri lakes and rivers and noted that there are 176,140 registered motor boats in the state.

Canoe and boat races are allowed on the lakes and rivers as long as they adhere to proper safety rules, McDaniel said. He added that boat racing is the safest type of racing, if properly conducted.

He advised everyone who owns a boat to have a courtesy safety check before the season begins. Sometimes, boaters are stopped just for spot checks, so it is wise to have the boat inspected and carry all required safety devices at all times, he noted.

Boat accidents must be reported, just as auto accidents are reported. But boating accidents are on the decline, he said.

Patrolmen also assist in times of floods by seeing that people reach safety. Promotion of water safety is a primary duty of the patrolmen, he said.

Guest Kiwanians from Cape Girardeau who attended the meeting were Wayne Rust, Harold Kuehle, Byron Foust and Norval Cannon. Other guests were George Moorman and Joe Childress.

Fire Chief Vernon Morris will be guest speaker at next week's meeting. Kiwanis Lt. Gov. Ken Sharp of Cape Girardeau will make his official visit to the local club on Feb. 24.

Two Intolerable Factors Fan Inflation

Aside from the Arab "oil squeeze", there are two other intolerable situations fanning the flames of runaway inflation.

1. The fantastic wage demands of the power-hungry union leaders, and

2. The unbelievable welfare mess.

Our legislators have the means and the power to curb these forces of destruction and waste, but to date there is no indication any positive action will be taken.

The big unions, having bought their way into effective political control of Congress, do not fear any repressive legislation will surface — their self-confidence is very evident by their aggressive and arrogant posture.

The unscrupulous union takeover in Alaska should alert Congress to the dangers which could one day engulf us all. Unless our Congress acts to suppress the powerful unions' insatiable thirst for complete political dominance and virtual dominance and vitrtual dictatorship over the business community, we can surely expect a bleak future for the economy, and for all who live on fixed incomes or are not aligned with a union.

As for the welfare debacle, it's like "Old Man River" — just keeps rolling along, piling up waste of taxpayers' dollars by the billions. Legislators, preoccupied with their self-serving concerns for increased salaries, bigger and better expense allowances, world-wide expense paid junkets to include their families and staffs and, with a sharp eye toward perpetuating their good political life by whatever means, simply resort to the usual meaningless rhetoric, shedding crocodile terars mixed with deep concern. This concern is never translated into corrective action because it might adversely upset many welfare voters back home.

A cancer, if allowed to progress unchecked, will eventually become terminal. Let's hope our legislators wake up to the economic malignancy in our land before it becomes termianl.

People in the news

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Actor Robert Redford, known for leading roles in such movies as "The Sting" and "Three Days of the Condor," has been named chairman of the Provo Canyon sewer district committee.

Redford, owner of Sundance ski resort in Provo Canyon, succeeds Ken Patten, who had been chairman since 1971.

The committee is seeking a grant to install a sewer system from Wasatch County east of Provo down through Provo Canyon.

A committee spokesman said Redford's term runs through December.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Comedian Dick Gregory, an activist during Mississippi's civil rights struggle of the 1960s, has been named a member of Gov. Cliff Finch's honorary staff of colonels.

The colonel designation, a traditional title awarded to supporters of Mississippi govrnors, also was extended to Fayette Mayor Charles Evers and Aaron Henry, head of Mississippi's Loyalist Democrats and the state president of the NAACP.

Gregory, who had made Mississippi and its politics the subject of many of his barbs in past years, was at the State Capitol Building during Finch's inauguration Tuesday.

The comedian entertained Monday night at one of several banquets honoring Finch and received his colonel's medallion at one of them.

LONDON (AP) — Rita Hayworth, the movie goddess of the 1940s, needed help getting off a TWA jetliner when it landed here on a flight from Los Angeles.

"Miss Hayworth started shouting and waving her arms about. She didn't want to leave the plane," said a TWA spokesman of the Monday evening incident.

Grandma gets there early to warmup

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — At age 71 Grandma Gae rides her bicycle to work, gets there early and roller-skates around the block to warm up for her school crossing guard duties.

"Jogging and tennis are just a passing fad," says Gae Schiffman, a crossing guard for the past seven years who maintains "you will always remain young if you stay active."

She started roller skating and ice skating in Bar Harbor, Maine, when she was 12. Her own children were taught to skate when they were 2 years old.

With her four grandchildren living some distance away, Gae has "adopted" the schoolchildren in Beverly Hills. Her love for the children is reciprocal.

At the end of the last term fourth grader Charles Levy looked at his report card and decided to make his own for Grandma Gae.

In carefully made block letters it said:

"Crossing the kids: A

"Crossing me: A

"Crossing my friends: A

"Being nice: A-plus."

On special occasions, such as the first and last days of school, Grandma Gae passes out raisins, apple juice or health food cookies to the children who regularly cross at her corner.

"I tell them they will have sore teeth if they eat candy," she said.

Besides her duties as a crossing guard, she conducts private lessons in roller skating, ice skating and bicycle riding for the children.

"But no skateboards," she said. "They're a menace. I once saw a skateboard fly out from underneath a youngster and puncture the gas tank of a car."

For their mothers, Grandma Gae tried to start a bicycle club in Beverly Hills, a bastion of the wealthy and social conscious. "It was for their figures, but they prefer the reducing salons," she said.

Her curly, natural brown hair has not turned gray because she uses only soap and water on it and is outdoors a lot, she said.

"I think sitting under hair dryers damages the hair," she said. "Women worry about their looks too much. I ride by at 5:30 in the morning, and most of the women I see have their hair up in curlers and cream on their faces.

"Their wrinkles — that's their only interest. My wrinkles don't bother me at all."

Her day begins at 5 a.m.

"I'm out on my bicycle as soon as I can," she said. "But don't think I'm not a meticulous housekeeper. I always get my housework done. I don't go to bed until one or two in the morning. Older people don't need as much sleep, I guess."

Ireland's bogs another Vietnam?

CROSSMAGLEN, Northern Ireland (AP) — If the bogs could suddenly turn into rice paddies, the southern part of County Armagh could be mistaken for a rerun of South Vietnam.

The big troop buildup is on again. Helicopters beat overhead. The latest model armored vehicles with cannons that can fire into the next county clatter down lonely, cratered roads after small guerrilla bands whose diverting disguise is the everyday garb of the peasantry.

But the handwriting on the greystone walls and bombed out pubs reads: "Provos rule here." The Provos are the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army.

In Crossmaglen, the most dangerous town in Ulster, where 37 British soldiers have been killed, a company of the Royal Scots 1st Battalion sits in a corrugated tin fort, piled high with sandbags and camouflage netting, that resembles one of those Special Forces A camps out on the Laotian border.

The Provos keep it in an almost constant state of siege. An occasional foot patrol ventures out, usually after dark, with the men in flak jackets and faces smeared black and the officers concealing their insignia in their back pockets.

As at Dak Pek of Dak Sut, all supplies have to be flown in — even the beer, which is ironic in a town with 16 pubs.

The army considers the narrow, twisting roads into Crossmaglen "not viable," which means they have lost too many men and too many vehicles to landmines to venture where the bread man goes every day. The surrounding countryside is green and lovely, but eerily empty and spooked with silence.

Since the new year began nine Roman Catholics and 11 Protestants have been murdered in a wave of sectarian assassinations that provoked Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain to send more troops and special counterinsurgency units to South Armagh. Maj. Edward Cowan, commanding the beleaguered Crossmaglen outpost, briefed the reinforcements: "You must realize that every single person is passively or actively engaged against you here. There is no one you can call your friend."

There was no mention of winning minds and hearts in an area where a shopkeeper would be burned out for serving a British soldier.

They play a game with flags around here, the way the Viet Cong used to with the Saigon government. As this is written, the tricolor of the Irish republic is flying defiantly over the burned out town hall of Crossmaglen, a border village of 1,000 people, overwhelmingly Catholic, that fancies itself "the capital of the Republic of South Armagh."

They play a coin game, too. The Provos stamp IRA on the queen's coins, and Protestant extremists stamp UDA, for Ulster Defense Association, on coins from the Irish republic, which are accepted in pubs on the British side of the border.

Armagh, Northern Ireland's southernmost county, was the ancient seat of Ulster's high kings and still is the ecclesiastical capital of all Ireland for both Catholics and Protestants. Her population includes 75,000 Protestants, mostly centered in and around the linen mill towns at the northern end of the county, and 57,000 Catholics, mainly in the south end, which is surrounded on three sides by the Irish republic.

Defying the crown was a way of life here long before the Provos proclaimed their rule in white-washed letters. The granite-studded hills, still contain much venerated "Mass rocks", where hunted priests held clandestine services in the days of the Cromwellian purges. The narrow lanes between the hedgerows and gorse and bracken-covered hills have witnessed centuries of ambush and crossfire.

From the Easter Rising of 1916, South Armagh's IRA units have conducted a constant campaign of sabotage against British mailboxes, telephone booths, railway lines and customs houses. Since the new troubles began, the post office in Newry, which serves South Armagh, has lost 34 trucks to bombs and hijackers.

"There's going to be a bad end to it, but I'll not live to see it," said Mrs. Kevin O'Callaghan, who lives "just over the fields" from where three British soldiers were killed Nov. 22. A foot patrol of the Royal Scots had paid her a dawn visit recently.

"It gave me a terrible fright, the way they pounded on the door," she said. "You never know around here. It could have been the other crowd, that killed the five brothers Sunday night." She was referring to the assassinations in two Catholic households on the night of Jan. 4 that brought about the revenge massacre of 10 Protestants going home from work in a minibus the next day.

Dutch settlers on Saba, Netherlands Antilles, drove French invaders off their almost perpendicular volcanic island in 1690 with stones. They piled them on planks laid across poles, then pulled away the poles, bombarding the enemy below.

Campaign trail no place for virtuous

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — When Common Cause composed a code of presidential campaign standards some months ago, and asked all entries to sweat allegiance, it received only one honest reply. Ron Cocome, manager of Gene McCarthy's independent candidacy, told Common Cause do-gooders to "take your standards and stuff them in your ear."

Calling the code "insulting," and adding, "I don't know who the blazes you think you are," Cocome thus became the only campaign officer of the season to say what many of the others think: that the post-Watergate penchant for morality in politics may be accelerating to the point where in the name of rectitude we are neglecting reason.

Cocome is worried that in so far as politics are concerned, "we are becoming a nation of super moralists." The growing attitude toward candidates high and low is that they are all crooks until proven otherwise. And the proof is becoming an ordeal of fire: Jimmy Carter prudently gave up even social drinking on the day he announced his presidential candidacy; at least one candidate has dragged his reluctant wife into his campaign for fear her absence would create rumors; glassy-eyed senators and congressmen haul out income tax, medical and even psychiatric records at every whistle stop.

Already the campaign has become the most puritanical of modern times, with Sargent Shriver boasting of his choir boy beginnings and other contenders quietly telling their staffs to, in effect, put the cards under the table when the reporters are about.

And things may get worse. "Before it's over," says Cocome, "the Girl Scouts will want to know how many cookies we bought." If there's anything worse than forgetting sin, he sighs, it's remembering it too much; corrupt politics are one thing, pious politics another — count the silverware.

No doubt there is good reason for Americans to suspect that political candidates have private lives that are of interest, perhaps even of concern. John Kennedy aside, there was for example Vice President Richard Johnson of the Martin Van Buren administration. He enjoyed three black mistresses so much he talked of it and was therefore denied a reelection candidacy by will of public contempt. As for rumors, they are endless, even Adlai Stevenson was charged with being a homosexual (in the 1952 race) by a vengeful former wife.

And there seems no doubt that where applicable a politician's squalid side must be discovered, it almost never being voluntarily divulged. Even by the press. Especially not by friends. When the late Sen. Tom Dodd of Connecticut was accused of financial fraud in the 1960s, Sen. Russell Long (D-La.) is alleged to have said it for all his pals. "I'll support you all the way on this, Tom, even if you're guilty."

Yet who is to judge what is squalid and what not? John Ehrlichman, the sermonizing felon from Richard Nixon's staff, told the Senate Watergate probers that he had personally known "of incumbents who are not discharging their obligations to their constituencies because of their drinking habits," and went on to insist that questions of a candidate's "fitness, drinking habits . . . and morality and all" were legitimate matters for exposure. Under this criteria alone, "morality and all," perhaps no one in the real world would qualify for president:

Edward Kennedy has had Chappaquiddick, to name just one morality bleep; Elliot Richardson has had some automobile accidents in which alcohol was a factor; Ronald Reagan paid no income tax in 1964; Hubert Humphrey has had many dreadfully shifty fund-raising habits; George Wallace forced his terminally ill wife to run as his proxy for governor of Alabama; even Barry Goldwater The Virtuous is said to have occasionally drunk too much during the 1964 campaign.

What in the end does it all prove? There are no statistics to support the contention that sobriety, chastity and thrift constitute leadership qualities. In fact, an argument can be made that great men have always been imperfect, very often even impure. Forget immaculacy in a democracy, says Ron Cocome; "If we want a system with no corruption, there is a working model in the Soviet Union."

Presidential nominating system reshaped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political reformers have reshaped the presidential nominating system, and the changes could help Republican Ronald Reagan and might, ironically, send Democrats back to a smoke-filled room to bargain on their candidate.

Under the reform rules adopted by both major parties the caucus-convention procedure is wide open, with everyone able to participate and any candidate who can inspire a following having a shot at winning delegates.

But most of the delegates, about 75 per cent of them, will be chosen or committed in primary elections in 30 states. There were 23 in 1972.

The primaries and the conventions have some important common features under the new rules. First, they make it easier for a darkhorse to win convention delegates, especially in the case of the Democrats who have adopted a proportional representation rule and have eliminated winner-take-all primaries, in which the candidate who won a plurality got the entire delegation.

Secondly, they favor the candidate with charisma and the ability to excite activist supporters.

People who troop through the snow to vote in primaries early in the year or stay through all-night caucuses are generally the political activists who support ideological candidates of the right or left.

The great mass of middle-ground voters tend to prefer centrist candidates in November, but frequently they don't bother to vote in the primaries. (New Hampshire's is the year's first, on Feb. 24. The last are June 8.)

This year none of the Democrats seems to be attracting the kind of devoted throngs of young supporters Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern once drew.

But on the Republican side, Ronald Reagan, former California governor and movie star, appears to have the charisma and ideological commitment to enlist the activists.

On the other hand, the very reforms that have opened the nominating process and made delegate distribution agonizingly fair have made it less likely that any Democratic candidate will go to the national convention in New York next July with a commanding lead.

However, those candidates who make it to the convention should have blocs of faithful delegates whose votes could be traded. So, while the delegate selection process may be reformed and open, the final horse-trading and nominating of a presidential candidate may be done in the smoke-filled rooms the reforms were suppose to end.

Old rules which allowed politicos to control a meeting by voting masses of proxies have been banned by both parties. Democrats permit a form of proxy voting, but only a person who actually shows up at a meeting may leave a proxy, if he departs before the meeting ends.

So the candidate who can get the most fans to the early caucuses will get the biggest share of a state's national convention delegates. That's exactly what McGovern did in 1972, packing caucuses with young supporters.

On the eve of the first caucus, Reagan appears to be the only candidate of either party possibly capable of packing caucuses with his supporters. He is clearly identified as a strong conservative with a committed constituency to draw from.

Unless President Ford can stir his supporters enough to tramp through the snow and sit through all-night caucuses, all the patronage and prestige of the White House may not be enough to offset a youth-oriented Reagan assault.

In addition to what reformers have done to the caucuses, the new rules have encouraged some states to switch from conventions to primary elections because they are less vulnerable to challenge and simpler to supervise. Primaries also tend to favor candidates with clearly established ideological appeal.

Armies of volunteers and voters attracted to a cause worked miracles for McCarthy and McGovern in primaries. This year no Democrat seems to be inspiring that kind of support.

The Democratic vote seems more splintered than ever, with most candidates playing it safe ideologically, and the new party rules make it less likely that any one candidate will break clearly out of the pack between now and the July national convention.

The main reason is the Democrats' new rule on proportional representation, forbidding winner-take-all primaries. The biggest casualty is the California primary, which traditionally has come late in the season and has awarded the nation's largest bloc of delegates to the statewide winner.

All this will make it more difficult for any one candidates to arrive at the Democratic national convention with a commanding bloc of votes. The likely consequence would be a brokered convention — one in which candidates or state delegation leaders trade delegate votes like stocks on an exchange.

The caucus process which begins in Iowa on Monday continues until June 8 with primaries that day in Arkansas, California, New Jersey and Ohio.

For the first time all of the nation's 10 largest states will hold presidential primaries — California June 8, New York April 6, Pennsylvania April 27, Texas May 1, Illinois March 16, Ohio June 8, Michigan May 18, New Jersey June 8, Florida March 9, and Massachusetts March 2.

Fear first product of nuclear plants

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Instead of working ourselves into a frenzy about possible accidents in fission nuclear power plants, which in the long run are inevitable - we would better spend time and our effort doing research on improved safeguards, more reliable and less costly than those employed today.

For one thing is clear. In all too short a time — and for a considerable period — until that distant happy day when fusion nuclear power, solar power and the like become practical as major energy sources — we shall be heavily dependent on fission nuclear power plants if we are to get by the energy crunch in good shape.

There's been much talk about our great coal and oil shale resources, and these are magnificent assets. Coal use, for one will gradually be tripled in four decades or so. There was considerable talk for awhile that shale and coal could fill the energy breach. But newer studies have convinced even those who have invested heavily in these resources, that the difficulties of rapid coal and shale production are so great we cannot count on them meeting our needs in the near and mid term future. In fact, the date at which men in this field see coal and shale production at significant levels dreamed of only a year back keeps slipping into the future.

By contrast, nuclear power is practical now in much expanded quantities, delayed only by the time required to build plants and hassle in endless lawsuits over differences on environmental problems which should have been long resolved if only both sides would get their facts straight.

And fission nuclear power can be made considerably cheaper, relatively, that is, relatively, what with the price of everything going up all too rapidly — with a reasonable amount of experience in running plants and added research. Equally important, nuclear power plants can be made safer if we will put a greater effort into practical experiments and depend less on mathematical probabilities to assure ourselves that all is well.

The building of a strong domestic nuclear industry has collateral advantages. Billions we must today send abroad for imported petroleum would be used to build domestic nuclear power facilities, expand exploration and mining and promote a wide range of supporting industries, giving direct and indirect employment to a good many additional men and women.

Safer, more efficient nuclear power plants would have a ready market in Western Europe, Japan and in assorted countries. The growth of this industry worldwide would reduce the economic inbalances which heavy dependence on foreign oil now creates. This bolstering of a flock of domestic economics would promote stability.

And of course, as things go now, there's the continuing threat of petroleum blackmail, which can be lessened or removed only by increasing our relative energy self-sufficiency to reasonable levels.

Much of the concern over fission nuclear plants arises from the belief they will eventually be built in such commanding numbers the world will be flooded with dangerous nuclear byproducts and wastes — and that there will be a high probability of accidents, a probability which increases, of course, with the number of plants.

In our nuclear thinking, we need to remember that, important as they may be for an interim period, fission nuclear plants are not likely to be a dominant power source in the long term. They will probably, therefore, never be built in the numbers sufficient to justify the worries outlined above. And the thesis of this column has been that added research can further significantly cut the probability of serious accidents.

Presidential nominating system reshaped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political reformers have reshaped the presidential nominating system, and the changes could help Republican Ronald Reagan and might, ironically, send Democrats back to a smoke-filled room to bargain on their candidate.

Under the reform rules adopted by both major parties the caucus-convention procedure is wide open, with everyone able to participate and any candidate who can inspire a following having a shot at winning delegates.

But most of the delegates, about 75 per cent of them, will be chosen or committed in primary elections in 30 states. There were 23 in 1972.

The primaries and the conventions have some important common features under the new rules. First, they make it easier for a darkhorse to win convention delegates, especially in the case of the Democrats who have adopted a proportional representation rule and have eliminated winner-take-all primaries, in which the candidate who won a plurality got the entire delegation.

Secondly, they favor the candidate with charisma and the ability to excite activist supporters.

People who troop through the snow to vote in primaries early in the year or stay through all-night caucuses are generally the political activists who support ideological candidates of the right or left.

The great mass of middle-ground voters tend to prefer centrist candidates in November, but frequently they don't bother to vote in the primaries. (New Hampshire's is the year's first, on Feb. 24. The last are June 8.)

This year none of the Democrats seems to be attracting the kind of devoted throngs of young supporters Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern once drew.

But on the Republican side, Ronald Reagan, former California governor and movie star, appears to have the charisma and ideological commitment to enlist the activists.

On the other hand, the very reforms that have opened the nominating process and made delegate distribution agonizingly fair have made it less likely that any Democratic candidate will go to the national convention in New York next July with a commanding lead.

However, those candidates who make it to the convention should have blocs of faithful delegates whose votes could be traded. So, while the delegate selection process may be reformed and open, the final horse-trading and nominating of a presidential candidate may be done in the smoke-filled rooms the reforms were suppose to end.

Old rules which allowed politicos to control a meeting by voting masses of proxies have been banned by both parties. Democrats permit a form of proxy voting, but only a person who actually shows up at a meeting may leave a proxy, if he departs before the meeting ends.

So the candidate who can get the most fans to the early caucuses will get the biggest share of a state's national convention delegates. That's exactly what McGovern did in 1972, packing caucuses with young supporters.

On the eve of the first caucus, Reagan appears to be the only candidate of either party possibly capable of packing caucuses with his supporters. He is clearly identified as a strong conservative with a committed constituency to draw from.

Unless President Ford can stir his supporters enough to tramp through the snow and sit through all-night caucuses, all the patronage and prestige of the White House may not be enough to offset a youth-oriented Reagan assault.

In addition to what reformers have done to the caucuses, the new rules have encouraged some states to switch from conventions to primary elections because they are less vulnerable to challenge and simpler to supervise. Primaries also tend to favor candidates with clearly established ideological appeal.

Armies of volunteers and voters attracted to a cause worked miracles for McCarthy and McGovern in primaries. This year no Democrat seems to be inspiring that kind of support.

Mississippi Court rules on Garrison extradition briefs

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Mississippi Supreme Court today granted opposing attorneys permission to file longer briefs in state efforts to extradite Dr. Norman Garrison Jr. of Corinth to Missouri to face murder charges.

The court ruled that both the state and Garrison could file written briefs 10 pages longer than the normal 50-page limit on the written outlines of legal arguments by the opposing sides. The briefs are due this month.

Garrison successfully opposed earlier efforts in Marshall County Circuit Court to extradite him on murder charges in the Sept. 8, 1974, slaying of his former wife, Lee Ann Garrison of Kennett, Mo.

Charles Baker, prosecuting attorney for Dunklin County, Mo., had asked Gov. Bill Waller to order Garrison returned to that state for trial on the charges. The prosecutor said part of his case was based on a bloody fingerprint found at the slaying scene.

Garrison denied being in Missouri at the time, claiming he spent the night with friends on a houseboat on Pickwick Lake near the Mississippi-Alabama-Tennessee line.

Waller conducted an extradition hearing in October 1974 and several weeks later ruled that the conflicts in evidence should be resolved by a Missouri jury.

However, Garrison surrendered to authorities in Marshall County and on Jan. 8, 1975, Circuit Judge W. W. Brown blocked the extradition.

Big Ben is silent

Painter John Stilling holds on to one of the bells inside Big Ben's clock tower, the London landmark that towers over the houses of Parliament, after the famous chimes were silenced this week for routine decoration. The painters will be working in the room that contains weights in the striking mechanism that swing out to within an inch of the wall, so the chimes will be silenced for 51 hours from 0900gmt Tuesday until noon on Thursday. It is believed to be the first time since 1956 the chimes have been silenced.

Ex-convict being sought as bank robbery suspect

KENNETT, Mo. — The Federal Bureau of Investigation is searching for a former Olympia, Wash., convict for questioning in last week's armed robbery of a Kennett bank.

Sources close to the investigation said the man who used the alias Dennis Holmes during the three days he spent here before robbing the bank and escaping by airplane bears a strong resemblance to a 39-year-old fugitive known as Dennis Lahman.

The Bootheel Plaza facility of Bank of Kennett, located across a busy street from the municipal airport, was robbed of $24,511 last Thursday.

The robber spent three days here, mostly playing chess and talking with airport employes while purportedly waiting to meet a business partner.

After forcing a lone employe into a small room at the bank, authorities said the man walked back across the street to a waiting orange and white Piper Cherokee and flew east.

There has been no trace of the plane, perhaps filled with enough fuel to fly 500 miles, and authorities speculate the man may have landed in a farm field to make a getaway by car.

Law enforcement officials in Missouri, Tennessee and Arkansas, as well as airports across the country, have been alerted.

Investigators said Lahman was paroled in August 1974 at Chicago Heights, Ill., after serving a portion of a 30-year sentence for the armed robbery of a Spokane, Wash., bank in 1970 in which six persons were tied in a bank vault for several hours.

Lahman reportedly left Chicago Heights in October without advising his parole supervisors and arrived at Sarasota, Fla., using the alias Dennis Holmes.

Since the holdup at Kennett, the FBI at Sarasota has found papers left by Holmes indicating him to be Lahman, including a business card showing him to be an executive with a Chicago Heights jewelry firm.

Officers at Sarasota said Holmes was "loaded with money" when he arrived there in October, and immediately spent $1,000 for clothes and $7,000 to refurbish an apartment before enrolling in an aviation school.

"He was an excellent student and missed only a couple of classes when he said he had to go see his mother," said Joe Appleyard, chief pilot for Dolphin Aviation.

Holmes was on his way toward earning his pilot's license when he disappeared in late December after leasing the $18,000 aircraft from Dolphin.

Mississippi Court rules on Garrison extradition briefs

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Mississippi Supreme Court today granted opposing attorneys permission to file longer briefs in state efforts to extradite Dr. Norman Garrison Jr. of Corinth to Missouri to face murder charges.

The court ruled that both the state and Garrison could file written briefs 10 pages longer than the normal 50-page limit on the written outlines of legal arguments by the opposing sides. The briefs are due this month.

Garrison successfully opposed earlier efforts in Marshall County Circuit Court to extradite him on murder charges in the Sept. 8, 1974, slaying of his former wife, Lee Ann Garrison of Kennett, Mo.

Charles Baker, prosecuting attorney for Dunklin County, Mo., had asked Gov. Bill Waller to order Garrison returned to that state for trial on the charges. The prosecutor said part of his case was based on a bloody fingerprint found at the slaying scene.

Garrison denied being in Missouri at the time, claiming he spent the night with friends on a houseboat on Pickwick Lake near the Mississippi-Alabama-Tennessee line.

Waller conducted an extradition hearing in October 1974 and several weeks later ruled that the conflicts in evidence should be resolved by a Missouri jury.

However, Garrison surrendered to authorities in Marshall County and on Jan. 8, 1975, Circuit Judge W. W. Brown blocked the extradition.

Big Ben is silent

Painter John Stilling holds on to one of the bells inside Big Ben's clock tower, the London landmark that towers over the houses of Parliament, after the famous chimes were silenced this week for routine decoration. The painters will be working in the room that contains weights in the striking mechanism that swing out to within an inch of the wall, so the chimes will be silenced for 51 hours from 0900gmt Tuesday until noon on Thursday. It is believed to be the first time since 1956 the chimes have been silenced. (AP Wirephoto)

Ex-convict being sought as bank robbery suspect

KENNETT, Mo. — The Federal Bureau of Investigation is searching for a former Olympia, Wash., convict for questioning in last week's armed robbery of a Kennett bank.

Sources close to the investigation said the man who used the alias Dennis Holmes during the three days he spent here before robbing the bank and escaping by airplane bears a strong resemblance to a 39-year-old fugitive known as Dennis Lahman.

The Bootheel Plaza facility of Bank of Kennett, located across a busy street from the municipal airport, was robbed of $24,511 last Thursday.

The robber spent three days here, mostly playing chess and talking with airport employes while purportedly waiting to meet a business partner.

After forcing a lone employe into a small room at the bank, authorities said the man walked back across the street to a waiting orange and white Piper Cherokee and flew east.

There has been no trace of the plane, perhaps filled with enough fuel to fly 500 miles, and authorities speculate the man may have landed in a farm field to make a getaway by car.

Law enforcement officials in Missouri, Tennessee and Arkansas, as well as airports across the country, have been alerted.

Investigators said Lahman was paroled in August 1974 at Chicago Heights, Ill., after serving a portion of a 30-year sentence for the armed robbery of a Spokane, Wash., bank in 1970 in which six persons were tied in a bank vault for several hours.

Lahman reportedly left Chicago Heights in October without advising his parole supervisors and arrived at Sarasota, Fla., using the alias Dennis Holmes.

Since the holdup at Kennett, the FBI at Sarasota has found papers left by Holmes indicating him to be Lahman, including a business card showing him to be an executive with a Chicago Heights jewelry firm.

Officers at Sarasota said Holmes was "loaded with money" when he arrived there in October, and immediately spent $1,000 for clothes and $7,000 to refurbish an apartment before enrolling in an aviation school.

"He was an excellent student and missed only a couple of classes when he said he had to go see his mother," said Joe Appleyard, chief pilot for Dolphin Aviation.

Holmes was on his way toward earning his pilot's license when he disappeared in late December after leasing the $18,000 aircraft from Dolphin.

SS answers: Will supplement be discontinued

EDITOR'S NOTE: The answers to the following frequently asked questions were provided by the Social Security Administration.)

Q. I recently heard that people who get Social Security payments can have their monthly checks deposited directly to a bank or other financial organization. Where can I get more information abut this procedure?

A. If you get monthly Social Security checks, you got information in the mail with your check. You can also get information by calling your financial organization or any Social Security office.

Q. The people at the savings and loan association I deal with told me that I can have my supplemental security income check deposited directly into my account if I want to. How would that help me?

A. Direct deposit of your check has several advantages. Even if you are away from home, your check would be deposited instead of setting in your mailbox. You would not have any problem in cashing your check because it will go directly into your account. You would not have to stand in line to cash or deposit your check. And you would not have to worry about losing your check after you receive it.

Q. I just got a letter from Social Security telling me that it's time for my redetermination. I've been eligible for supplemental security income payments for a year. Why do I have to have a redetermination?

A. Under the supplemental security income program, a yearly redetermination is made for each recipient. The purpose of the redetermination is simply to make sure that your payment amount is correct, and that there have been no changes in your income, resources or living arrangements.

Q. Both my wife and I get supplemental security income payments. We're thinking of moving in with our son. If we do, will our payments be affected?

Q. Supplemental security income payments to people who live in another's household may be reduced. If you do move, you should report the change in your living arrangements to a Social Security office right away. You should also report any changes in your income or resources.

Q. My father, who is 52, has been unable to work since he suffered a severe heart attack several months ago. He never worked under Social Security, but I think he might be eligible for supplemental security income. Would he be considered disabled?

A. He may be. A person is considered disabled if he is unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity because of a physical or mental impairment which has lasted or is expected to last for at least 12 months, or which can be expected to result in death. Your father should apply for supplemental security income as soon as possible at any Social Security office.

Q. My mother has to have a cataract operation, and the doctor said she'll need corrective lenses after the operation. Will Medicare help pay for the lenses?

A. Yes. Medicare's medical insurance helps pay for prosthetic devices needed to substitute for an internal body organ. In addition to corrective lenses needed after a cataract operation, prosthetic devices include heart pacemakers and ileostomy and colostomy supplies.

Q. I started getting Social Security student benefits this month. I work part time and know my earning can affect my monthly payments, but does this include earnings I had before my benefits started?

A. Yes. In determining your Social Security benefits for the year, earnings for the entire year are counted. This includes months before your benefits begin, as well as months after your benefits end.

If you earn over $2,520 for the year, your benefits will be reduced $1 for each $2 over $2,520. But no matter how much you earn for the year, you can get your full Social Security benefit for any month in which you neither earn over $210 nor do substantial work in your own business.

Q. My brother was severely injured in a boating accident two months ago. He has not applied for disability benefits yet because he says there's a five-month waiting period. When should he file?

A. Even though there is a five- month waiting period before disability benefits can begin, people should apply for benefits as soon as they become disabled. By filing early, the claim may be completely processed during the waiting period and benefits can begin at the earliest possible time -- for the sixth full month of disability.

Pot tests under attack

MORTON, Ill. (AP) — A federally funded plan to test the effect of marijuana smoking on male sexual response is under attack by a newly formed citizens group calling for protests to federal officials.

"We don't think this is a legitimate experiment," said Rosemary Thomson, of Morton, state director of Eagle Forum. "You could not print in the newspaper a copy of the grant application. It is, in my opinion, just obscene."

The tests are to be conducted by Dr. Harris Rubin, a psychologist at Southern Illinois University. Rubin was awarded a $121,000 federal grant last spring to administer marijuana to paid male volunteers and test their response and sex hormone levels as they view stag films.

"As I understand the law, (a citizen) could not show pornographic movies and charge for it, but under this the government is paying for it and showing them free," said Mrs. Thomson. "Now what kind of logicis that?"

Rubin is still awaiting a U.S. Justice Department grant of immunity from prosecution for distributing the drug. Mrs. Thomson said she sent a mailgram to U.S. Atty. Gen. Edward Levi opposing the experiment.

"The federal government is billions of dollars in the red," she said. "Why should we expend taxpayers' money on an experiment that has little or no redeeming value?"

Responding to such criticism in the past, Rubin has said an important element of his study will be the effect of marijuana on sex hormone levels. He says some persons use marijuana believing it will improve sexual performance, and he suspects it will do just the opposite.

Though millions of Americans have used marijuana the scientific community lacks basic information about its clinical effects, he says.

Eagle Forum is a national organization formed last fall in St. Louis, and has Illinois chapters in Danville, Decatur, Springfield, Peoria and Morton, said Mrs. Thomson. She said the organization "stands for God, home and country...we stand for principles the founding fathers believed in when they established America."

Mrs. Thomson said she objects to the volunteers in Rubin's study being shown the sexually stimulating films. If the experiments were to test the effect of marijuana on some other kind of human activity, such as the ability to reason, she would not oppose them, she said.

Pot tests under attack

MORTON, Ill. (AP) — A federally funded plan to test the effect of marijuana smoking on male sexual response is under attack by a newly formed citizens group calling for protests to federal officials.

"We don't think this is a legitimate experiment," said Rosemary Thomson, of Morton, state director of Eagle Forum. "You could not print in the newspaper a copy of the grant application. It is, in my opinion, just obscene."

The tests are to be conducted by Dr. Harris Rubin, a psychologist at Southern Illinois University. Rubin was awarded a $121,000 federal grant last spring to administer marijuana to paid male volunteers and test their response and sex hormone levels as they view stag films.

"As I understand the law, (a citizen) could not show pornographic movies and charge for it, but under this the government is paying for it and showing them free," said Mrs. Thomson. "Now what kind of logicis that?"

Rubin is still awaiting a U.S. Justice Department grant of immunity from prosecution for distributing the drug. Mrs. Thomson said she sent a mailgram to U.S. Atty. Gen. Edward Levi opposing the experiment.

"The federal government is billions of dollars in the red," she said. "Why should we expend taxpayers' money on an experiment that has little or no redeeming value?"

Responding to such criticism in the past, Rubin has said an important element of his study will be the effect of marijuana on sex hormone levels. He says some persons use marijuana believing it will improve sexual performance, and he suspects it will do just the opposite.

Though millions of Americans have used marijuana the scientific community lacks basic information about its clinical effects, he says.

Eagle Forum is a national organization formed last fall in St. Louis, and has Illinois chapters in Danville, Decatur, Springfield, Peoria and Morton, said Mrs. Thomson. She said the organization "stands for God, home and country...we stand for principles the founding fathers believed in when they established America."

Mrs. Thomson said she objects to the volunteers in Rubin's study being shown the sexually stimulating films. If the experiments were to test the effect of marijuana on some other kind of human activity, such as the ability to reason, she would not oppose them, she said.

Angola Botch

By Robert M. Bartell

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Liberty Lobby News Service)—As high-powered CIA operatives are dispatched to Angola with millions of dollars of bribe money as well as helicopters, missiles and other hardware, you may ask, "Why, WHY this new potential Vietnam in Africa?"

What we see now in Angola is the emerging part of the iceberg of Soviet-American relations and the interests and motives which determine our government's world policies. As you may already have heard, Angola is a very rich morsel of the former Portuguese empire. It's nearly as big as Alaska but all in the temperate zone. It has many millions of acres of rich farmland. . .gold, diamonds, rare and strategic minerals of all kinds. . .and oil, big oil offshore along its 1,000-mile South Atlantic coast.

Next door, Rhodesia and South Africa boast the thickest coal seams in the world, the biggest gold mines and the richest diamond fields. Angola's very rich farmland, prosperous industries and vast natural resources are up for grabs. That is why our CIA and the Soviet KGB are slugging it out there. Nobody knows where that slug-fest is going to take us. Our government has had clandestine—covert—operations in Angola ever since the Eisenhower Administration, when the anti-communist, staunchly pro-American Salazar regime was in power in Portugal.

But those operations were getting nowhere until Henry Kissinger came into office as President Nixon's segundo—in charge of foreign affairs. Using his powers as the White House chief operative of the CIA, he "destabilized" the anti-communist regime in Portugal and assisted in the socialization of the Lisbon government.

Of course the Soviets were also duly represented. The big idea was to give the bum's rush to the white regimes in Southern Africa—Portuguese Angola and Mozambique, English Rhodesia and Anglo-Dutch South Africa. A grandiose scheme, the South African Trading Zone (SATZ), was to supervise the white man's rule in the area. In that grand scheme the Rockefeller family, together with its allies, the Rothschilds and the billionaire Oppenheimer family of South Africa, were to be on the ground floor. They were to divide among themselves the entire boodle—the immense wealth in gold, diamonds, other minerals and oil to be found in the area.

Kissinger had in his corner the Prime Minister of South Africa, John Vorster, whose prime purpose seems to be to sacrifice Rhodesia's English settlers to gain time for himself. It was a beautiful plan—financially—for the Rockefeller family and the international bankers.

But things went wrong. The Soviets also had ambitions in Angola and are in there now with thousands of Cuban troops and sophisticated Soviet equipment.

Harris advocates controls on oil, steel and auto industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Fred Harris advocates price controls on the oil, steel and automobile industries as the way to fight inflation while he seeks to break up the nation's largest corporations.

Harris contends that America's largest industries have monopolistic power, and he says he would seek to split them apart for the sake of economic competition and to curb consumer prices. He claims that heightened competition would put to work marketplace forces that would curb prices and lead to more production and more jobs.

Harris proposes a mix of antitrust action, government price ceilings and public service jobs as his answer to economic woes. The plan is couched in general, theoretical terms. It does not include specific revenue-raising proposals to cover projected spending to create jobs or the other economic programs he wants to introduce.

Harris said if he becomes president he will ask Congress for the power to control prices — but not wages.

Government figures show that between November 1973 and November 1975 the consumer price index rose by 20.3 per cent while average hourly wages went up 16.1 per cent.

Harris claims those statistics are evidence that wage controls would not be needed.

Yet under his plan, there would be no limits on what unions could demand in wages from industries whose prices would be government-controlled.

The former Oklahoma senator, making his second bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, also said if he succeeds, his administration would go after "shared monopolies" by challenging them in court and by seeking new antitrust laws.

He defines a shared monopoly as a situation in which four or fewer corporations control 70 per cent of an industry.

He also attacks oil companies that control gasoline production from the well to the service station pump. Harris contends if different companies controlled the various stages of production, the resulting competition would inevitably drive down prices.

The oil companies would also be prevented from controlling production of competing fuels such as coal, Harris said, and that also would tend to lower prices.

Harris said in an interview that there should be a $28-billion tax cut in 1976, but only for individual taxpayers, not for businesses.

That would be $15 billion higher than the break individual taxpayers are getting this year. Harris said he would offset the cut by imposing higher taxes on large corporations and on the wealthy, but neither he nor his advisers could spell out specific measures or their potential revenues.

"We have one-third idle plant capacity, primarily because consumers don't have enough money," Harris said. "A tax cut is particularly necessary now to offset new price increases which otherwise would take money out of the economy and further slow recovery."

Harris said temporary price controls on some industries are needed until price competition is restored.

"In our economy," he said, "unemployment does not tend to bring down prices, it tends to force them up.... Because of monopoly control, industries such as the automobile industry are allowed to act to the detriment of both workers and consumers and, in the face of falling demand, lay off workers and reduce production, but make up for lost profits by increased prices consumers must pay."

Harris said his restructuring of the economy would eventually lower the unemployment rate. He says that as the economy reacts to increased competition, prices will decline. In addition, he says, consumers will have more spending money in hand because of tax cuts. Harris says increased demand for lower priced consumer products will lead to increased production and more jobs.

For those still unemployed, Harris would establish a permanent reservoir of two million locally controlled public service jobs in health care, day care centers, transportation and environmental clean-up projects at an estimated annual cost of $6.4 billion.

"We ought to commit the country to full employment and mean it," he said.

The Harris economic plan is without specific proposals for financing the measures he wants to take.

For example, Harris has no proposal for financing his jobs program, saying only that revenues will increase when the economy picks up.

Harris maintains that over-all there would be little net increase in federal expenses under his proposals because higher spending would be offset by increased tax revenues as the economic situation improves and people get back to work.

That is a common theme among Democrats, who base it on estimates that each one percent of unemployment costs the government $15 billion in lost revenues and increased social welfare costs.

But that theme remains a theory without proof in practice. And conservative economists along with Republican critics say job spending programs like those Harris advocates would not pay for themselves but would simply rekindle high inflation.

On energy, Harris said, "By law, we ought to say that these automobile companies no longer can make or sell new cars which average less than 22 miles to the gallon."

He said a public energy corporation should take over to speed development of new sources of energy like geothermal and solar power.

Utilities should not be allowed to encourage industrial users to waste electricity by giving discounts to large customers, he said.

Harris criticized Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger for what he called a "secretive elitist approach" to diplomacy.

On the Middle East, Harris said it was dangerous for Kissinger to promise nuclear plants and weapons to Arab nations.

"It makes no sense to furnish Israel with planes and tanks and supply sophisticated antitank and antiaircraft missiles to (the Arab countries) to knock them down anyway," Harris said.

He said arms deliveries to Israel would continue because it has special ties to the United States and is "one of a small and dwindling number of countries among us that are left in the world that are democratic."

The United States should, however, sponsor regional economic development among all the Middle East countries and that would include U.S. economic assistance to the Arabs, Harris said. He gave no figures for the cost or financing of such aid.

In dealing with the Soviet Union, Harris said the United States should obtain concessions in the arms race by exploiting the Russians' increasing need for American technology and agricultural products.

"We ought to get more in return, more in the way of reduction of the arms they are furnishing the Arab countries, more in theway of reducing the arms race and more in respect to human rights within the Soviet Union," he said. Harris said it would work because "they need our stuff."

Harris said the killing power of both sides' nuclear arsenals makes a continuation of the arms race irrelevant.

"We have more than a sufficiency in military strength to resist whatever threat might come and ominously the power to destroy every man, woman and child in the Soviet Union several times over," he said.

Harris said he would reduce the Pentagon budget by $14.7 billion but could not say specifically how much individual programs would be cut, nor could he or aides say how the $14.7-billion figure was arrived at. He would drop the B1 long-range bomber sought by the Air Force ($86.9 million each), stop development of super-sophisticated nuclear warheads on land-based missiles and withdraw most of the 250,000 American troops from Europe and Korea.

Harris also said the United States should re-establish relations with Communist Cuba.

Harris advocates controls on oil, steel and auto industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Fred Harris advocates price controls on the oil, steel and automobile industries as the way to fight inflation while he seeks to break up the nation's largest corporations.

Harris contends that America's largest industries have monopolistic power, and he says he would seek to split them apart for the sake of economic competition and to curb consumer prices. He claims that heightened competition would put to work marketplace forces that would curb prices and lead to more production and more jobs.

Harris proposes a mix of antitrust action, government price ceilings and public service jobs as his answer to economic woes. The plan is couched in general, theoretical terms. It does not include specific revenue-raising proposals to cover projected spending to create jobs or the other economic programs he wants to introduce.

Harris said if he becomes president he will ask Congress for the power to control prices — but not wages.

Government figures show that between November 1973 and November 1975 the consumer price index rose by 20.3 per cent while average hourly wages went up 16.1 per cent.

Harris claims those statistics are evidence that wage controls would not be needed.

Yet under his plan, there would be no limits on what unions could demand in wages from industries whose prices would be government-controlled.

The former Oklahoma senator, making his second bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, also said if he succeeds, his administration would go after "shared monopolies" by challenging them in court and by seeking new antitrust laws.

He defines a shared monopoly as a situation in which four or fewer corporations control 70 per cent of an industry.

He also attacks oil companies that control gasoline production from the well to the service station pump. Harris contends if different companies controlled the various stages of production, the resulting competition would inevitably drive down prices.

The oil companies would also be prevented from controlling production of competing fuels such as coal, Harris said, and that also would tend to lower prices.

Harris said in an interview that there should be a $28-billion tax cut in 1976, but only for individual taxpayers, not for businesses.

That would be $15 billion higher than the break individual taxpayers are getting this year. Harris said he would offset the cut by imposing higher taxes on large corporations and on the wealthy, but neither he nor his advisers could spell out specific measures or their potential revenues.

"We have one-third idle plant capacity, primarily because consumers don't have enough money," Harris said. "A tax cut is particularly necessary now to offset new price increases which otherwise would take money out of the economy and further slow recovery."

Harris said temporary price controls on some industries are needed until price competition is restored.

"In our economy," he said, "unemployment does not tend to bring down prices, it tends to force them up.... Because of monopoly control, industries such as the automobile industry are allowed to act to the detriment of both workers and consumers and, in the face of falling demand, lay off workers and reduce production, but make up for lost profits by increased prices consumers must pay."

Harris said his restructuring of the economy would eventually lower the unemployment rate. He says that as the economy reacts to increased competition, prices will decline. In addition, he says, consumers will have more spending money in hand because of tax cuts. Harris says increased demand for lower priced consumer products will lead to increased production and more jobs.

For those still unemployed, Harris would establish a permanent reservoir of two million locally controlled public service jobs in health care, day care centers, transportation and environmental clean-up projects at an estimated annual cost of $6.4 billion.

"We ought to commit the country to full employment and mean it," he said.

The Harris economic plan is without specific proposals for financing the measures he wants to take.

For example, Harris has no proposal for financing his jobs program, saying only that revenues will increase when the economy picks up.

Harris maintains that over-all there would be little net increase in federal expenses under his proposals because higher spending would be offset by increased tax revenues as the economic situation improves and people get back to work.

That is a common theme among Democrats, who base it on estimates that each one percent of unemployment costs the government $15 billion in lost revenues and increased social welfare costs.

But that theme remains a theory without proof in practice. And conservative economists along with Republican critics say job spending programs like those Harris advocates would not pay for themselves but would simply rekindle high inflation.

On energy, Harris said, "By law, we ought to say that these automobile companies no longer can make or sell new cars which average less than 22 miles to the gallon."

He said a public energy corporation should take over to speed development of new sources of energy like geothermal and solar power.

Utilities should not be allowed to encourage industrial users to waste electricity by giving discounts to large customers, he said.

Harris criticized Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger for what he called a "secretive elitist approach" to diplomacy.

On the Middle East, Harris said it was dangerous for Kissinger to promise nuclear plants and weapons to Arab nations.

"It makes no sense to furnish Israel with planes and tanks and supply sophisticated antitank and antiaircraft missiles to (the Arab countries) to knock them down anyway," Harris said.

He said arms deliveries to Israel would continue because it has special ties to the United States and is "one of a small and dwindling number of countries among us that are left in the world that are democratic."

The United States should, however, sponsor regional economic development among all the Middle East countries and that would include U.S. economic assistance to the Arabs, Harris said. He gave no figures for the cost or financing of such aid.

In dealing with the Soviet Union, Harris said the United States should obtain concessions in the arms race by exploiting the Russians' increasing need for American technology and agricultural products.

"We ought to get more in return, more in the way of reduction of the arms they are furnishing the Arab countries, more in theway of reducing the arms race and more in respect to human rights within the Soviet Union," he said. Harris said it would work because "they need our stuff."

Harris said the killing power of both sides' nuclear arsenals makes a continuation of the arms race irrelevant.

"We have more than a sufficiency in military strength to resist whatever threat might come and ominously the power to destroy every man, woman and child in the Soviet Union several times over," he said.

Harris said he would reduce the Pentagon budget by $14.7 billion but could not say specifically how much individual programs would be cut, nor could he or aides say how the $14.7-billion figure was arrived at. He would drop the B1 long-range bomber sought by the Air Force ($86.9 million each), stop development of super-sophisticated nuclear warheads on land-based missiles and withdraw most of the 250,000 American troops from Europe and Korea.

Harris also said the United States should re-establish relations with Communist Cuba.

Study reveals racial prejudices rampant among young Americans

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A 12-year study of 5,000 elementary and high school students shows that racial and religious prejudices are rampant among young Americans, a sociologist says.

A high proportion of white, non-Jewish students studied displayed negative feelings toward both their black and Jewish peers, exhibiting a stronger prejudice against the former group, said Dr. Charles Y. Glock.

Glock, a professor of sociology at the University of California, told the 62nd annual meeting of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith Thursday that most students based their prejudices on beliefs that social differences are genetic in nature.

The validity of Glock's findings was challenged by a colleague who said the survey was designed to encourage prejudiced responses.

Glock's report, entitled "Adolescent Prejudice," was based on surveys of 8th, 10th and 12th grade students in three unnamed school districts within 200 miles of New York City.

Some prejudicial stereotypes projected on black teen-agers included "immorality, trouble-making, gaudiness and vanity," he said. He said many positive stereotype traits were projected on Jews, such as "high intelligence" and "being good citizens," but a commonly expressed negative trait was "greed."

Much of the blame for perpetuation of prejudice lies with the public schools for failing to deal with the problem directly, Glock said.

"Rather than lead in the formation of values, schools generally mirror the prevailing attitudes of the communities they serve," he said. "Schools have dealt with the problem of prejudice through a policy approximating benign neglect."

Earned income credit offered to taxpayers

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the second in a series of five articles entitled "Coping With Your Income Tax." They were written to help taxpayers prepare their 1975 tax returns.

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Low-income workers, and students with part-time jobs, are among persons who may be overlooking valuable income by not filing tax returns, even if they are not required to.

The law exempts single persons with income below $2,350 and married persons with joint income below $3,400 from having to file a tax return.

But for 1975 the government has enacted an earned income credit that could result in benefits of up to $400 for a low-income worker with a dependent child.

Although most students don't qualify for the income credit, many probably forego tax refunds each year by failing to file tax returns for part-time jobs where tax money has been withheld from their pay.

The earned income credit is equal to 10 per cent of a worker's earned income up to a maximum of $400 on incomes of $4,000. Above $4,000, the credit is reduced by 10 per cent of the amount by which total income exceeds $4,000.

The credit disappears entirely when total income reaches $8,000.

A married couple with a child and with $3,000 in earned income could be sacrificing a $300 check from the government by failing to file a tax return, even though they aren't required to.

To claim the credit, a worker must have a dependent child and must file a joint tax return, if married, using the 1040 short form if he or she wishes. If the taxpayer owes a small amount of tax, the IRS will first deduct that from the credit before sending the balance to the taxpayer.

But it must be remembered that the credit is only for earned income, not for such things as unemployment benefits, retirement income, welfare benefits, interest or dividends.

One purpose of the earned income credit is to give low income persons an additional incentive to engage in at least some work, even though they are receiving welfare benefits, for example.

Income from a job at home counts as earned income.

Single persons without dependents are excluded from the credit, however. The law requires that the worker maintain a household that is the principal place of residence for him or her and also for a child under age 19, or a student, who qualifies as a dependent.

But even before the earned income credit came along, an IRS spokesman said some workers, especially students, were neglecting to file tax returns when it would have paid them to do so.

An IRS spokesman says the government suspects that many persons forego tax refunds from the government, simply because they do not know they are entitled to them.

He said this is particularly the case with students who have taxes withheld from their paychecks during summer jobs. Although they do not earn enough money to have to file a tax return, they likely would have the withheld taxes refunded to them if they did file.

A student, or any other person, who has $750 income is supposed to file a tax return if he or she is claimed as a dependent on a parent's tax return.

Some receipts are not income for tax purposes for any taxpayers. The 1975 tax rebates, which were rebates of 1974 taxes, are in this category.

Other exempt income and compensation includes unemployment benefits, Social Security payments — including the $50 bonus paid in 1975, veteran's benefits, life insurance proceeds from the death of the insured, gifts, inheritances, welfare payments and scholarship and fellowship grants.

Study reveals racial prejudices rampant among young Americans

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A 12-year study of 5,000 elementary and high school students shows that racial and religious prejudices are rampant among young Americans, a sociologist says.

A high proportion of white, non-Jewish students studied displayed negative feelings toward both their black and Jewish peers, exhibiting a stronger prejudice against the former group, said Dr. Charles Y. Glock.

Glock, a professor of sociology at the University of California, told the 62nd annual meeting of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith Thursday that most students based their prejudices on beliefs that social differences are genetic in nature.

The validity of Glock's findings was challenged by a colleague who said the survey was designed to encourage prejudiced responses.

Glock's report, entitled "Adolescent Prejudice," was based on surveys of 8th, 10th and 12th grade students in three unnamed school districts within 200 miles of New York City.

Some prejudicial stereotypes projected on black teen-agers included "immorality, trouble-making, gaudiness and vanity," he said. He said many positive stereotype traits were projected on Jews, such as "high intelligence" and "being good citizens," but a commonly expressed negative trait was "greed."

Much of the blame for perpetuation of prejudice lies with the public schools for failing to deal with the problem directly, Glock said.

"Rather than lead in the formation of values, schools generally mirror the prevailing attitudes of the communities they serve," he said. "Schools have dealt with the problem of prejudice through a policy approximating benign neglect."

Earned income credit offered to taxpayers

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the second in a series of five articles entitled "Coping With Your Income Tax." They were written to help taxpayers prepare their 1975 tax returns.

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Low-income workers, and students with part-time jobs, are among persons who may be overlooking valuable income by not filing tax returns, even if they are not required to.

But for 1975 the government has enacted an earned income credit that could result in benefits of up to $400 for a low-income worker with a dependent child.

Although most students don't qualify for the income credit, many probably forego tax refunds each year by failing to file tax returns for part-time jobs where tax money has been withheld from their pay.

The earned income credit is equal to 10 per cent of a worker's earned income up to a maximum of $400 on incomes of $4,000. Above $4,000, the credit is reduced by 10 per cent of the amount by which total income exceeds $4,000.

The credit disappears entirely when total income reaches $8,000.

A married couple with a child and with $3,000 in earned income could be sacrificing a $300 check from the government by failing to file a tax return, even though they aren't required to.

To claim the credit, a worker must have a dependent child and must file a joint tax return, if married, using the 1040 short form if he or she wishes. If the taxpayer owes a small amount of tax, the IRS will first deduct that from the credit before sending the balance to the taxpayer.

But it must be remembered that the credit is only for earned income, not for such things as unemployment benefits, retirement income, welfare benefits, interest or dividends.

One purpose of the earned income credit is to give low income persons an additional incentive to engage in at least some work, even though they are receiving welfare benefits, for example.

Income from a job at home counts as earned income.

Single persons without dependents are excluded from the credit, however. The law requires that the worker maintain a household that is the principal place of residence for him or her and also for a child under age 19, or a student, who qualifies as a dependent.

But even before the earned income credit came along, an IRS spokesman said some workers, especially students, were neglecting to file tax returns when it would have paid them to do so.

An IRS spokesman says the government suspects that many persons forego tax refunds from the government, simply because they do not know they are entitled to them.

He said this is particularly the case with students who have taxes withheld from their paychecks during summer jobs. Although they do not earn enough money to have to file a tax return, they likely would have the withheld taxes refunded to them if they did file.

A student, or any other person, who has $750 income is supposed to file a tax return if he or she is claimed as a dependent on a parent's tax return.

Some receipts are not income for tax purposes for any taxpayers. The 1975 tax rebates, which were rebates of 1974 taxes, are in this category.

Other exempt income and compensation includes unemployment benefits, Social Security payments — including the $50 bonus paid in 1975, veteran's benefits, life insurance proceeds from the death of the insured, gifts, inheritances, welfare payments and scholarship and fellowship grants.

Missourians for honest elections go to court

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missourians for honest elections still think their campaign reform act will stop future Watergates. But now they may have to go to court because part of it is more than they bargained for.

The group which sponsored a successful 1974 initiative drive is considering a lawsuit challenging the Missouri Election Commission's interpretation of the $500 exemption provision.

The commission ruled the wording of the referendum requires all candidates who spend under $500 to file economic disclosure statements indicating sources of personal income. Candidates are also required to file names of donors providing $100 or more to a candidate or spouse.

"This ruling is contrary to the interpretation which we took throughout the campaign, contrary to the representation to the voters, to the press, and to many organizations throughout the state," John Rava, president of the group, wrote in a letter to the statewide steering committee.

The orginators of the act say they intended minor officeholders be exempt from filing personal income information provided they spent less than $500 in their campaign.

"We acknowledge that the exemption wording should have been more clear, particularly in view of the fact that differing interpretations have been given to it," Rava said a year ago.

And despite repeated appearances at state Election committee's hearings on the issue, the commission reaffirmed its position last November that minor officeholders were not exempt but encouraged the group to attack their ruling in a court action.

"Considerations have been given to this course of action for several months and finally, the officers have decided to hire independent, experienced counsel to bring a lawsuit to attempt to overturn the ruling of the Missouri Elections Commission with respect to the scope of the Section 8 exemption," Rava wrote.

Rava said the organization is waiting for responses from the steering committee to determine the best action.

In a telephone interview from his St. Louis law firm, Rava said a decision will not be made until later this week, "because of the expense involved, the length of time it could take and other variables."

The letter to steering committee members requested comments and funds earmarked for the Missourians for Honest Elections defense fund.

The law's $500 provision has affected thousands of minor offices throughout the state creating a controversy, especially among candidates for jobs that pay no salary.

Opponents of the section say the law discourages citizens from running for minor office, because of their opposition to reporting personal income.

Supporters of the ruling say the public has a right to know the sources of income for all candidates.

Samuel Murphy, Elections Commission chairman, has said they had to abide by the actual wording of the initiative referendum which was approved by a near 4-1 margin by voters. The resounding success of the referendum was attributed by many to the panic over Watergate.

Murphy earlier pointed out that the $500 exemption could be unfair to some candidates. For instance, he said, a candidate running unopposed for a seat in the Missouri Legislature might not spend more than $500 on his campaign and would be exempt. But another candidate who was unlucky enough to have opposition that required him to mount a major campaign would have to reveal his income sources.

In addition to the possible lawsuit on the exemption, several bills have been introduced in the legislature relating to the same issue.

Two of the three House bills want to limit financial disclosures to candidates spending over $500, and another would exempt from the campaign finance act those who spend less than $500 campaigning for a job which pays less than $1,000 a year.

Alcohol: The new teen-age turn-on
New teen trend to alcohol

By Alton Blakeslee and Brian Sullivan

SECOND IN A SERIES

He is only 10 years old, but already he is diagnosed as a full-fledged alcoholic.

A shocking incident....But it doesn't mean today's teen-agers are running full tilt after alcohol.

Yet, "all of the signs and statistics over the past couple of years have pointed to the fact that the switch is on among young people—from a wide range of other drugs to alcohol," says Dr. Morris Chafetz, a leading authority on alcohol and alcoholism.

"Arrests of young people for public drunkenness are occurring in larger numbers and at earlier ages. Alcoholics groups for teen-agers are springing up around the country, where there were none before 1970. Even among pre-teens—children between 9 and 12 years old—alcoholism is becoming more and more common."

This ominous trend now has been confirmed in stark terms by the Second Special Report on Alcohol and Health. This report contains some initial results from the largest study ever run on use of alcohol by teen-agers and "they indicate that alcohol use among young people in grades 7 through 12 is more extensive and more frequent than ever before."

Among seventh-graders, 63 per cent of boys and 54 per cent of girls have at least tried alcoholic beverages. By the 12th grade, it is 93 per cent of boys and 87 per cent of girls.

"Alcohol is far and away the drug of choice among youth," Dr. Chafetz says. Marijuana now is second, with only 40 per cent of senior high school boys and 30 per cent of girls reporting ever having used "pot."

Occasional drinking is by no means an invitation to alcoholism, and a ruined life. Parents and teachers must make this distinction, or may react with panic when they discover a teen-ager has had a drink, or is perhaps a bit tipsy, or even drunk for the first time, perhaps the only time. Some are just experimenting, as is natural among teen-agers.

Measures of the seriousness of teen-age drinking are hard to come by, says Dr. Frank A. Seixas, medical director of the National Council on Alcoholism in New York City.

There are some shocking word-of-mouth stories, Dr. Seixas says. For example: The teen-ager who goes baby-sitting and drains an inch or so from several bottles of liquor in the family cabinet, to be found drunk when the parents return home....School custodians finding beer cans and liquor bottles in trash cans at schools....Designated lockers at a high school where one youngster has stashed the day's liquor supply for his buddies, the teen-age bar....Reports that a few students go regularly and gladly to school because there they can find their first drink of liquor that day.

With official statistics lacking, "we cannot definitely say there is a huge increase in drinking and alcoholism among teen-agers. But it is my clinical impression that there probably is," the physician adds.

It may be no more than a fad. Even so, it is a serious matter, for addiction can lead to serious consequences.

The sexual pattern of drinking is changing. Women now account for the largest increase in the drinking problem in recent years, and the figures are rising rapidly, says Dr. Chafetz.

And a few babies are actually being born drunk to women addicted to alcohol.

Civil rights movement aid down

NEW YORK (AP) — The civil rights movement is now barely paying its way in America after a decade flushed with success.

And some black leaders say that all funds should be raised from black communities because the support of affluent whites can no longer be relied upon.

"The white liberals are giving their money to their favorite presidential candidates, not the civil rights movement," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of Chicago-based Operation PUSH.

"And the Jewish middle class is contributing all their spare cash to the state of Israel these days. With the tightened economy, more and more people are concentrating on their own special interests."

The money crunch had hurt most civil rights organizations, some more seriously than others.

The North Carolina branch of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference suspended operations in October because of a $17,000 debt, and the state leader moved to Delaware to work with a group of ministers.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization, is reportedly $250,000 in debt, and the deficit "is reaching a point where it could imperil critical programs that are the lifeblood of the organization, including its foremost thrust in school desegregation," according to one official.

The only civil rights organization holding its own seems to be the National Urban League "which had a very good year last year, well over our projection," said William Sims, director of the organization's fund department. The Urban League's advantage over the other non-profit civil rights organizations is that it has the direct support of American industry in its programs to integrate work forces.

But even the Urban League is getting the message that there is a diminishing interest in the civil rights movement in America.

"A white corporation executive told me recently 'civil rights is no longer popular,'" Sims said.

Other black leaders blame President Nixon and President Ford for taking the emphasis off equal employment and other civil rights issues.

"Just because black communities are quiet does not mean that we have made enough progress," said Ed Reed, an executive assistant in the Boston chapter of the NAACP. "Reports of such progress are misleading and blacks are liable to be on the streets again when they realize how poorly they are faring economically."

The 66-year-old NAACP reportedly has had trouble meeting its payroll in the New York headquarters "but we are nowhere near the spot where we might go under," an official said.

The association has 1,400 chapters and a membership of around 450,000, and some sources see renewed fund raising vigor when the respected, but aging association head, Roy Wilkins, retires later this year.

The Rev. Jackson of PUSH says that the depressed economy and the diminishing interest in civil rights "has given the black community its biggest challenge yet."

Jackson says that the black middle class must now assume responsibility for the financing of the black struggle.

"We have had some black representation in the past — lawyers, doctors, preachers. But as our new fund raising base we need support from the new generation of moneyed blacks, the black executives, the black athletes. They are all successful as a direct result of the civil rights struggle. Yet eight out of 10 black athletes don't financially help the civil rights movement." Jackson said.

PUSH was $400,000 in debt a few months ago, but two public benefits raised half that amount.

Some officials within the NAACP say their base membership fee of $4 should be raised to cover increased expenses.

The Rev. Jackson says the only hope for black organizations is to totally take over their financing and administration.

Missouri House making fast start

By Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The Missouri House is making a fast start in this legislative session thanks to pre-session committee meetings in December and to leadership pressure.

House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, has employed a quota system requiring committees to pass one bill a week out of committee so the full House can work on it.

The quota system does not apply, however, to the House Democratic leadership's program.

An example of the faster pace is that on the second day of the first real working week, the House debated and passed legislation calling a statewide vote to approve extension of home rule charters to all counties.

Social Security eligibility for those 62 defined

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Most men and women who reach 62 in 1976 can collect monthly Social Security checks if they've worked as little as 6.25 years in jobs covered by Social Security, according to Gary Eason, Social Security Administration district manager.

"To be eligible for Social Security retirement benefits," Eason said, "you need, at a minimum, quarters of work equal to the number of years between 1950 andthe year you reach 62. So, if you reach 62 in 1976, you need at least 25 quarters – or 6.25 years – of work credit."

"Most employes get credit for a quarter of work if they're paid $50 or more in that quarter for work covered by Social Security," Eason said. "Most self-employed people get Social Security credit for four quarters in any year their annual self-employment net income is $400 or more."

"Quarters of work credit help determine eligibility for Social Security retirement benefits, Eason said, "but they don't affect the amount of your monthly check. That's based on your average earnings covered by Social Security over a set period of time.

"You can find out how much work and earnings are credited to your Social Security record free of charge," he said.

2 bills of statewide importance discussed in Missouri House

By J.T. HOWARD
157th District representative

JEFFERSON CITY — Two bills of statewide importance were discussed in the Missouri House of Representatives last week, the first of which was presented for debate was House Joint Resolution 58, which would allow counties the option of having county home rule.

The option to elect the charter form of government is brought about by initiative petition by which eight per cent of the population voting for governor in the previous gubernatorial election in a given county can request that the issue be placed on the general election ballot.

If the population in the county votes in favor of the proposition for area home rule, then a bipartisan commission is appointed by the circuit judge in the given county and this particular commission then decides to hold public hearings to determine what type of charter shall be developed for the county government.

The charter would specify the form of government as to whether the county will have county judges or elected legislators and a county administrator. The Senate has not found much support for the bill. The bill has been passed to the Senate by a vote of 88-44.

The second bill taken up this week was House Bill 1163 which is designed to compensate victims of crimes for losses due to the crime itself with a maximum outlay paid to the victim of $10,000. The commission would be appointed to hear these cases and determine the amount of compensation to the victim. This bill passed the house the first time by a narrow margin without my support. House Bill passed 82-59 for perfection.

The Transportation Committee held its first hearing Jan. 13. The first bill on the agenda was a bill which would require that the railroads place a boxcar or buffer car between the engine and any hazardous material being towed in that train and also a buffer car in front of any caboose in a train.

This legislation is being brought about by varioius railroad employe organizations based on the experience that they have had and the numbers of accidents caused by shifting loads causing accidents. The legislation brought out additional information regarding railroads in general and during this hearing it was admited by the railroad lobbyists that the railrosds where being required to put 70 per cent of their net profit derived from the recent rate increase back into track maintenance and repair.

The Interstate Commerce Commission made this ruling requiring the railroads to do this as part of approving their rate increase. The railroads now have this ruling under appeal to the Supreme Court.

I think it is interesting that the Interstate Commerce Commission thought it imperative that track meaintenance be a part of their rate increase. It would seem the railroads do not want to do their part without being forced to do so.

In the hearing it was brought out that nearly all railroads have divided their profits into other businesses and thereby let the railroad itself fall into a state of economic chaos.

Board of regents to meet Thursday

CAPE GIRARDEAU — An unusual afternoon session is on tap Thursday for the Southeast Missouri State University Board of Regents.

Dr. Robert Leestamper, university president, said the open session of the January board meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m. because the large number of items to come before the regents at their personnel session is expected to take up the morning hours.

Normally, the board begins its personnel session at 9 a.m., and the open meeting starts about 10:30 a.m. and winds up about noon.

Items on the agenda for the open portion of Thursday's meeting include reports on the university's budget request, spring semester enrollment and the University Center.

Married student housing for Southeast Missouri State is also scheduled to be discussed by the board, as are several recommendations of the Board of Publications relating to advertising in the student newspaper.

Program celebrating musical theatre planned

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A program celebrating 200 years of the American musical theater will be the second presentation this school year of the cultural programs committee at Southeast Missouri State University.

"Musical America", a revue which traces the development of this American form of theater and which includes songs ranging from one written in 1799 to one written in 1973, will be presented at 8 p.m. today in the Academic Hall auditorium at the university.

The show is open to Southeast Missouri State students and faculty members and to members of the Cape Girardeau-Community Concert Association. Members of other community concert organizations with which the Cape Girardeau group has a reciprocal agreement may also attend.

There are no reserved seats, and no individual tickets are available.

The revue is produced by Cameo Productions, Ltd. of New York and directed by Allan Lokos.

Members of the cast are soprano Jacqueline Kroschell, mezzo soprano Carol Flemming, tenor James Wilson, baritone J. T. Cromwell and bass Saverio Barbieri. Miss Kroschell is president of Cameo Productions.

The costumes, props and multi-media effects used in "Musical America" were specifically designed for the revue.

Twenty-seven songs are included in the show. Among the best-known numbers are "Swanee", "Ol' Man River", "Oklahoma", "Anything You Can Do" and "Cabaret."

Land use problems to be discussed

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Land use problems in the Mississippi Valley will be the subject of an illustrated lecture which will be presented at 7 p.m. today at Southeast Missouri State University.

The lecture will be part of the environmental issues course at Southeast Missouri State, but it is open to all interested persons, according to the course coordinator, Paul Heye, associate professor of biology. The class meets in Room 200 of North Hall of Science.

The speaker will be Dr. David Bedan of St. Louis, president of the Coalition for the Environment and Midwest regional representation of the National Sierra Club's environmental education committee.

Dr. Bedan is the first of a number of outside speakers who will be involved in the class, Heye said.

The class this semester is focusing on the general topic of land use. In other semesters the topics have been human population problems and energy.

Area residents are invited to attend any of the class meetings, Heye said.
